aim to get Haycroft out of the way. It was very easy for me to kill the rich man under suspicious circumstances—at least I had Pitblado manufacture the circumstances—which went to show that Haycroft had poisoned the old gentleman to get his money. The ingenuity required was to weave a lot of circumstances that would convict Haycroft and yet he must be innocent.

vict Haycroft and yet he must be innocent.

Nothing very original about that, you say. Well, if there is any originality in the matter at all I didn't supply it.
Fate lays all the plots for stories, and all we scribblers do is to write them up. Nevertheless, though I didn't know it, I was doing the biggest job of my life. And do you know while I thought I was writing a blood and thunder love tragedy I was turning bitterness and gall in a real household into a great happiness.

The story was coming out, the installments appearing once a week. I had convicted the hero, and he was waiting the result of an appeal which I intended to have denied by a merciless judge. I was writing the description of the hanging and intended as soon as it was over to drive the heroine insane and conclude with her shricks dying away gradually as doors were closing behind her in a madhouse. The issue of the paper had ap-ed to hang an imaginary character but, after all, did it not come about on the principal of an ad.?

We got the drug clerk off with light shricks dying away gradually as doors were to drive the shricks dying away gradually as doors were containing an explanation of that chain of circumstances which had convicted the murderer. Though they were not to save him, I felt bound to show my skill in finding a key to them which if brought to light would save the victim. But, relying as I did on a double tragedy at the end, I proposed to bring out the key when it was too late to do any good. You see, I didn't lined to spoil the tragic effect by being chicken hearted, especially as the peeple involved were merely creatures of my own brain. Besides, I remembered the instructions of the managing and intended and in the long of with the meteor of the save him the managinary character. But, after all, did it not come about on the principal of on ad.?

We got the drug clerk off with light unushment and had Barton up in our ditorial rooms, where I was introduced to him as the man who had saved him from a felon's death. He asked me if I had really written the story on the theory that Middleton had been polsoned by the mistake of a drug clerk. The look of noncommittal wisdom I put on was a stroke of genius. It claimed nothing for me, but lied to do any good. You see, I didn't intend to spoil the tragic effect by being chicken hearted, especially as the peeple involved were merely creatures of my own brain. Besides, I remembered the instructions of the managing editor, and I was to attract the attention of the reading public, which increases the circulation of the paper and brings in the advertisements, the ultimate object of the whole thing.

About a week after the appearance of the issue containing the explanation of the incidents that had proved writing the removal of Gwendolin to the containing the explanation of the reading public, which increases the circulation of the paper.

a madhouse, a servant knocked at my door to say that a man was downstairs who wished to see me.
"Get out of here," I cried, "and tell the man to get out too! I'm doing work that must not be interrupted."
The maid went away and returned to say that she thought the man was having a fit. It required something of the sort to cause me to break off from my work, and, throwing down my pen, I hastened away. The man had burled his face in the lounge pillows and was giving way to violent spasmodic contortions. Hearing me enter, he arose and faced me. I never saw greater agony on any face. He looked from me to the maid and pointed to the door. I told her to leave us and closed the door behind her. Then I turned to my visitor.

"How did you get on to it?" he asked his eyes starting out of his head.
"Get on to what?" "My making up that prescription inen i coued the drug clerk in and introduced him to the manuging editor. Heaton gave him what money he wanted and told him to go where he liked—leaving his address, of course— and keep bis mouth shut. The next morning out came scare heads anmorning out came scare heads announcing that a remarkable combina-tion detective-fiction exploit had led to the discovery that George Barton, the man who had been convicted of the murder of Banker Middleton, was innocent. This set everybody agog for the next issue.

In the morning we announced that the borning we announced that the paper had produced a drug clerk whose mistake had caused the poison-ing of Middleton. A hint was thrown out that an author-detective who wrote ing of Middleton. A hint was thrown out that an author-detective who wrote exclusively for the paper had built a theory of his own as to the cause of Middleton's death and had written the story with the intent of bringing out the real culprit.

And so it came about that an innocent man was saved from a hanging because people like to read about such tragedies and because I was instructed to hang an imaginary character But, after all, did it not come about on the principal of an ad.?

Their Use on an Important Scale Dates From 1876, The first experimental philosopher to liscover that electric light could be produced by a dry battery was Sir Humphry Davy, who in 1810 exhibited a light three inches long, between car bor points, before the Royal society of London. But no commercial value was bor points, before the Royal society of London. But no commercial value was attached to the use of electricity as an illuminant until more than half a century later. The Centennial explicition, held in Philadelphia in 1876, really marks the era of our present form of electric light, though electric lights had been in use abroad prior to that time. The exhibition of models and practical demonstrations of electric lights at Philadelphia in 1876 attracted the attention of scientists and capitalists in this country, and the first incandescent lamps and the first arc system were put to practical use in a small way in 1878. The Brush arc light gained favor in the beginning as the most adaptable for street lighting, and Cleveland, O., the home of Charles Francis Brush, the inventor, was the initial American city to adopt the arc system for street lighting.

Cagliostro, the famous eighteenth century charlatan, was the hero of many strange stories. A great lady who was also, unfortunately for her-self, an old one and was unable to reself, an old one and was unable to re-sign herself to the fact was reported to have consulted Cagliostro, who gave her a vial of the precious liquid (his "wine of Egypt"), with the strictest in-junction to take two drops when the moon entered its last quarter. While waiting for this period to arrive the lady who desired to be rejuvenated shut up the vial in her wardrobe and the better to insure its preservation in-formed her maid that it was a remedy for the colic.

QUEEN FABRIC CO.,

CHOATE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

The Woburn Charitable Association, by gift from Mrs. Helen O. Sprague, has acquired the house and land formerly known as the Painney Estate, for use as a Nurses' Home in connection with the Choate Memorial Hospital.

Some alterations and repairs need to be made to adapt the house to the use to which it is to be put, and it must be furnished throughout.

For this purpose money must be had and the Finance Committee of the Hospital issues this appeal to the public for aid. It is estimated that the cost of repairs, alterations and furnishings will be $3,000, or less than one half of the sum that was quickly and generously given two years ago for the equipment of the present hospital building,

This public appeal is not made for ordinary maintenance charges, but is for funds for a permanent addition to the Hospital property, thus enabling it the better to carry on its humanitarian work.

The Finance committee will receive subscriptions and any member of the Committee will be glad to confer with those who may wish more detailed information before deciding what they ought to give. Checks may be sent to Edward Johnson, Treasurer, by whom they will be acknowledged. Let all who can show their good will by giving JOHN W. JOHNSON

We have technical colleges, but we need industrial kindergartens to teach our boys and girls how to do the simplest things in life, and to them intelligently.

This is the age of specialization, even in the ordinary vocations. We are specializing to so great an extent that old methods no longer meet the industrial need of the present day. Our educational institutions must keep pace with the new order of things; and for this reason attention must be given not merely to the highmust be given not merely and possibly more.

For the initiative and the referendum. Labor

Labor is the foundation upon which the structure of popular government is built, and as such it must be recognized, its just demands met, its rights guarded and protected. It must have every legislative safeguard that capital has.

The Judiclary
I think we are all agreed that the first duty of a free government is to ensure the prompt enforcement of legal rights as between man and man. There is no excuse for a delay of years before a plaintiff can finally establish his rights, or a defendant be finally relieved of the trouble and uncertainty of a law suit.

I am well aware that in this state delays in the trial of causes have amounted to a practical denial of justices.

It is evident that some method must be found of clearing the dockets of the superior court, so that cases may be speedily heard and determined; and to this end I recommend that the number of justices be increased.

I further recommend that the present salaries of the justices of the substitute of the superior of the superior of the trial of cases have a speedily heard and determined; and to this end I recommend that the number of justices be increased.

Election Reforms
Turning now to the consideration of our election methods, let us give earnest thought to the subject of campaign expenses. The use of money in our elections has become a great evil, for it amounts to a substantial denial of the privilege of a man of moderate means o aspire to many public offices in the ommonwealth; or else it overwhelmcommonwealth; or else it overwhelm ingly tempts him to make his secret peace with those private interests which will finance his campaign if he will serve them in office.

It has become no small part of the lobby today to go about the state before the caucuses, "setting up dis-tricts;" in other words, making pri-vate agreements to supply candidates with campaign funds if they will promise in return to be friendly to ministrative departments . . . appear to be an arithmetical chaos. They need simplification and co-ordination; they should supplement and explain each other, and lead to some clear and logical conclusion."

To correct this evil it is necessary to prohibit those methods of campaigning which cost so much money, and are not in themselves necessary for the proper enlightenment of the

for the proper enlightenment of the voters.

A healthy man does not need—and ought not to have—a carriage to convey him to the polls to perform a duty which he covered by the press and of legislators will be seen to the covered to the proper to the press and of legislators will be

Legislative Districts

The federal law requires the re-districting of the state at this time apportionment, but to guarantee that the people shall be equitaby repre

In the past this redistricting has been governed too largely by partisan considerations, and the districts have been laid out with a view to serving the interests of the dominant political The necessity of such a reform has just been clearly shown at our state

To the direct primary must be formed the power of recall; so that any public servant who proves recreant to his trust may be immediately dismissed.

In the last session of the general court an expenditure of $3,000,000 missed.

Important as these steps are, it is of far greater importance that the people keep their power over legislation through the initiative and the referendum.

Under the conditions which exist to day, as I see them, these are the only true safeguards of representative government.

There are the conditions, then the state of the people of the people of the people, of the trimine how much the counties cost or two many officers are employed, or to the trimine how much the counties cost or two many officers are employed, or to the trimine how much the counties cost or two many officers are employed, or to the trimine of the press and of legislators will be termine how much the counties cost or two many officers are employed, or to the trimine or the trimine of the press and bis family.

State Commissions
On business principles, I am not in favor of commissions as a means of transacting public business, unless they are appointed subject to recall, for I believe their tendency is not in accord with popular or representative government.

They have practically no check placed over them. They multiply unnecessary officers and clerks, and thereby increase the expense of carrying on the work of the different branches of the state's activities.

As Stanley found shelter in the ve-randa he spied the stone lantern near-ity overgrown with some clinging vine.

"Who owns this house?" he asked onlekly.

The runner named a man in the neighborhood, "It was his daughter who lived in the house with her husband. They were newly married, and they called it 'the abode of peace and joy.' But the husband went away to war, and he never came back. The daughter lives with her parents, an inconsolable widow, and the little house is a place of sorrow."

Stanley thought over the little tragedy that had been briefly played out here, and then when the rain had stopped he sought the house of the owner and found it easy to purchase the stone laptern.

"My daughter will be glad. It grieves her to see even a distant glimpse of her former abode. I shall tear down the house one day and turn the place into a playground," said the dignified old gentleman.

tear down the house one day and turn the place into a playground," said the dignified old gentleman.

It was dark now, and his pipe had gone out. Stanley switched on the electrics and then extinguished them, lighting in their place several softy shaded lamps.

As he dressed for dinner he wondered idly who the girl was that the Claytons were bringing with them. Bob had said it was a friend of his wife's, and Mrs. Glayton had so many friends if was useless to puzzle his head over that. The other couple were the Lesters. The Claytons and the Lesters were his most intimate friends and had been Celia's, too, before she and Stanley had quarreled and separated. Celia had returned to her parents, and Stanley had gone to Japan and lately had returned to occupy the studio alone. Under the circumstances he rather wondered at the Claytons bringing along a strange girl.

Years of travel and hard work had not softened the blow of Celia's desertion after the blitter, foolish little disagreement. He had written once, but she had never replied to it. He tried not to think of her. In that way alone there was peace of mind.

Exactly at 8:30 the elevator stopped at his floor, and Nasogi threw open the studio door to announce the guests. Mand Clayton and Bessie Lester came in first, and close behind them was a third figure, at the sight of which Stanley's heart jumped into his throat and stayed there for awhile. Bob and Tony brought up the rear, covering the awkward situation with frivolous talk and stayetier.

In 1902 there was brought to the club a most remarkable relic of which the lord mayor of London had recently obtained possession. This was a loving cup holding a pint or a little more which, as certain inscriptions testified, was at one time the property of Oliver Goldsmith. On Goldsmith's death it passed into the hands of David Garrick and thence to the possession of one of the literary and artistic clubs of the day.

Then after an interval it passed into Dr. Johnson's hands, for one of the inscriptions engraved on its sliver rim scriptions engraved on its silver rim records that it was presented to Burke by his friend Samuel Johnson, dector of letters, as a memento of Johnson's visit to Beaconsfield, which was Burke's home. The date of the pres-entation was 1779, five years after the death of Goldsmith and five before the death of Johnson.

and the workmen who watch over the baking of the bread earn from 8 to 10 cents an hour, making an average of 90 cents a day for eleven hours on duty. They have coffee and bread free; also the use of a bathroom, for they are required to keep themselves spotlessly clean and must wash their hands eight times a day.

The best way to make a good clearance of rats is to turn a cobra into the place they inhabit. It will clear them out in an amazingly short time. But most people prefer the rats. Were it not for cats, owls, weasels and a few other animals in combination with man, in a short time the whole counman, in a short time the whole country would be one vast rattery, for the rate at which these animals increase is stupendous. They are without doubt one of the worst forms of vermin, but they possess one good quality. In a tight corner few animals are more courageous than the brown rat. Rats hard pressed have been known to fly at a man's throat. Time Braved the Anger of Peter the Great—His Miracle of the Sword and a Wondrous Deed of Daring.

Every nation has its typical jester, round whom crystallize Eulenspiegel, Italy its Punchinello, the orient its Nasreddin el Khoja and Russla its Balakireff. Like Joe Mil-ler, the last was a real character, though not all the jokes credited to though not all the jokes credited to him were his own. Some were inven-tions of a later age; others were bor-rowed from the past. He shares the credit for many of the latter with Joe Miller and Eulenspiegel.

Miller and Eulenspiegel.

History records that Balakireff was the favorite jester of Peter the Great. Tradition represents him as the constant company of that czar, frequently exercising his wit at royal expense. One day, for example, a cousin of his had fallen under the czar's displeasure and was sentenced to death. Balakireff undertook to obtain a reprieve. The czar guessed his errand even before he opened his mouth.

"No!" he cried. "Tis no use your coming here. I swear that I will not grant what you are going to ask!"

grant what you are going to ask!"

The largest bakery in the worm is located in Essen, Prussia, the home of the great Krupp gun factory. It is a vast building, in which seventy workmen, divided into two shifts, work night and day. Everything is done by machinery, says the London Post. A screw turns unceasingly a kneeding trough, into which are poured some water and ten sacks of flour of 200 pounds each.

This machine makes about 40,000 pounds of bread each day, in the shape of 25,000 small loaves and 25,000 large loaves, produced by 230 sacks of flour of 200 pounds each. All the operations of breadmaking are performed in this colossal bakery. And, b, when he unsheathed it the blade stood revealed as a wooden one. Peter laughed heartily at the knave's presence of mind and restored him to favor.

A more serious offense resulted in the banishment of the jester. "Never dare to appear again on Russian soil!" stormed the emperor. Judge then of he beheld his old favorite coolly driv

WHAT AND WHO NEXT. Last Monday the wideawake Boston newspapers made a wongave a highly entertaining account the next day. It was no less than that of a large number of Republican soreheads who had got together the day before and laid out a plan of campaign to defeat and choose Speaker Joseph Walker instead. The reason given by the news papers for getting up this plot against Lodge is his "conserva-tism" and Walker's "progressiveness," a quality the soreheads greatly admire and can't have too much of. They say Lodge is behind the times, and Walker will make the fluest kind of a "Progressive" Senator. Neither the Republican State Committee, nor the Lodge camwhen the papers gave the details of it on Tuesday morning it created immense surprise in them Speaker Walker is a "Pro-

It is generally understood, we believe, that Senator Lodge is to be the Republican candidate with opposition; but who the Democrats will select to be defeated by him had not been decided on at last accounts There is a belief in some quarters that Governor Foss is lying for it; but no prominent or leading Democratic statesman has been found who is willing to accept the empty honor of a Democratic nomination.

That Mr. Lodge will be elected without serious opposition hardly admits of a doubt. Strong with

The Church That Stands in the Field of Forty Footsteps.

The church in Woburn square, London, is sail to occupy the site of the "Field of Forty Footsteps," to which a tragic legend attaches. The story dates from the days of Momouth's rebellion. According to the version given in Mr. J. S. Ogilvy's "Relies and Memorials of London Town," two brothers fell in love with a woman who, either from callous vanity or fearing reprisals from the unsuccessful suitor, would not say which was to be the favored swain, suggesting that they should fight a duel and to the victor she would give her charms. They came from the town to this suburban field. The woman calmly sat down to await events. She had not long to wait, judging from the number of foot-prints, when one of the brother's fell dead, and as the victor approached she held out her arms to greet him, when, with a sudden revulsion of feeling for his brother's death, he slew her as she stood, and, turning the weapon, he drove it through his own heart. So they were found stiff in death with the footprints stamped in the wetchay, where they remained indelible through summer heat and winter frost; no green thing would grow, nor any man build himself a dwelling there. Streets were erected all round,

If you were a passenger on a rail-road train that collided with another, jumped the track, ran into an open switch or fell a victim to any of the A Parting of the Hair From Which other misfortunes that railroad trains are helt to, what would you do or what do you think you would do?

A writer in an engineering journal, after describing from his personal observation what most passengers do in such times of stress and peril—that is, "stand up and how!"—gives what he calls sound advice, which is simply "to drop upon the floor, preferably in the aisle, or cling to the seat frame."

That advice is not only sound, but simple. The trouble, however, is that not one person in ten can tell with any degree of certainty to what exother misfortunes that railroad trains What has become of our well known fellow townsman that used to brush his hair two ways from a line extending from crown to collar and swing the ends over his ears? He was a leading citizen. He sat in the next pew in front at church and always attended the shows. He worked in a bank in St. Louis and was mate on one of the Mississippi river steambats. He was a floorwalker in a New York dry goods store and kept a saloon just off the main street. Usually he wore a cluster of diamonds with a little chain attached in his shirt front. He was a conductor on the day express, a Mason and an Odd Fellow. He practiced medicine and worked in the boot and shoe store. He had been to California and played cards for money. his hair two ways from a line extend-

It was all the barber's fault. When he was in his prime and known to everybody the barber used to trim hair. Later he began to cut it. The Ruling Passion.

It is related of a certain German savant, to show how strong the ruling passion is in death, that as he was dying he exclaimed in French, in which language he was deeply learned, "Je meurs" (I die). Pretty soon he opened his eyes before passing away and added: "Man kann auch sagen, Je me meurs!" (One can also in French use the reflexive form of the verb "to

The Art of Boxing.

Pugilism, the practice of boxing or fighting with the fists, was a manly art and exercise highly esteemed among the ancients. In those days the hands of the pugliist were armed with the cestus, leather throngs loaded with the cestus, leather throngs loaded with lead or iron. This form of athletic sport was at first only permitted to freemen among the Greeks, but gradually it was taken up as a profession and lost much of its prestige.

As an illustration of its early use we find in Virgil's fifth Aeneld the record of a match between Dares, "with nimble feet and confident in youth." and Entellus, the veteran champion, "strong and weighty lighted," when the combatants—

This annual assemblage on the Schorfhalde has taken place every autumn for centuries past. Mention thereof has been found in documents more than a thousand years old. All sorts of theories have been put forward to account for it. Some natives say that the animals meet to decide matters affecting the leadership of their various clans. Proper Breathing.

To breathe properly take a deep, slow breath, another and another. Put both the hands on your ribs and see how they expand and contract as you breathe in and out. Put one hand on the low ribs in front and the other opposite it on the back. Feel how the back swells as you breathe. There is a powerful muscle called the diaphragm that divides the chest from the abdomen. As the heart and lungs are in the chest, the diaphragm may be called the floor of the chest. It is fastened to the backbone, the ribs and the sternum, or breastbone. And when people speak of diaphragmaths the testator.

ERRORS IN WILLS.

Two Famous Lawyers Whose Testaments Were Defective.

TILDEN'S CURIOUS BLUNDER

oesely Drawn Stipulations That Invalidated His Charitable Trust Be quest-President Polk's Will, Writ ten by Himself, Nullified.

Whether the old saying that "a law er who tries his own case has a foo for a client" is applicable to Samuel J. Tilden in the matter of drawing his will is not known. It was thought for some time that the will was drawn, o at least approved, by Charles O'Cond and James C. Carter, two of the mos eminent lawyers in New York, but later statements, says Case and Com-ment, are to the effect that they had nothing at all to do with the will, and nothing at all to do with the will, and consequently it is not definitely known who was responsible for it.

It would hardly seem possible that Mr. Tilden himself could have made such a mistake had he been acting for some one else. The statement has been made that Mr. Tilden had some doubts as to the validity of those clauses which the court subsequently condemned and had spoken to Mr. Carter about it, but nothing more came of it.

In summing up the provisions of the

In summing up the provisions of the Tilden will the court in holding it in valid stated that the testator in sub stance said: "I have determined to de stance said: "I have determined to devote my estate to charitable, educational and scientific purposes. I have formed no detailed plan how that purpose can be executed, but under the law of New York it must be done through and by means of a corporation. I request you to cause to be incorporated an institution to be called the Tilden trust," with capacity to maintain a free library and reading room in the city of New York, and such other educational and scientific objects as you shall designate, and if you deem it expedient—that is, if you think it advisable and the fit and proper thing to do—convey to that instituthink it advisable and the fit and proper thing to do-convey to that institution all or such part of my residuary estate as you choose, and if you do not think that course advisable then apply it to such charitable, educational and scientific purposes as in your judgment will most substantially benefit mankind."

It will be noted that the discretion of the trustees was indefinite both as to the amount which they were to give to the corporation to be formed and also as to whether they should give any at all to the incorporation, and the validity of the bequest was denied upon the ground of this complete discretionary power to convey or not to eretionary power to convey or not to convey to the suggested beneficiary. The trustees procured the incorpora-tion of the "Tilden trust" and elect ed to convey to it the entire property but the court held that the invalidit of the charitable trust because of its uncertainty could not be cured by any thing done by the trustees to execut it.

In striking contrast with the Tilden will is that of his contemporary in law and politics, Roscoe Conkling, the text of which is as follows: "I, Roscoe Conkling of Utlea, make, publish and declare my last will and testament as follows: I give, devise and bequeath to my wife Julia and to her helrs and assigns forever all my property and estate, whether real or mixed, and I constitute and appoint my said wife sole executrix of this my last will." It would undoubtedly take a better lawyer than even Mr. Conkling to break his will.

In passing upon the validity of the

It Changed the Life of a Clubman A Spinster Was Also In-terested In It

By F. A. MITCHEL Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Jenkins was an eminently respecta ble bachelor of forty.

One day he received an invitation to go with a friend who lived in the suburbs for dinner and the night. The difference between a house with a wo-man in it, to say nothing of several impish children, and his own solitary apartments was appalling. In his own bedroom he would awaken in the morning amid a tomblike silence. In this abode of a family he lay awake for nearly an hour listening to unceas-ing sounds that seemed like music to

There were a constant opening and shutting of doors, water pouring in a bathroom, children running, children a battroom, children running, children shouting, children scolded, children petted; now a few deep tones from a father warning Johnny that if he didn't stop fooling and dress himself he would get a spanking and now a feminine call to Edie to "come and the product of the control of the contr let me do your hair." It was the con-trast of this life about him—this union of hearts and interests—with his silent chamber that made him yearn for the one and hate the other, Jenkins returned to the city, spent the day in his office, went to his room -heaving a sigh as he entered itdressed for the evening and started for dressed for the evening and started for his club. Shortly before reaching it he passed a neat looking two story stone front dwelling in a window of which was a placard "To Let." He stood leaning on his cane looking at the house; then went on muttering:

'It's no use. I've no wife."

He went on to his club, sat down in He went on to his club, sat down in the reading room and listlessly took up a paper. But he did not read. He was going over the women of his acquaintance in a vain effort to pick out one he could love, one with whom he could make a home. This, too, was a failure. They all seemed to him like so many was figures in a show window. No responsive chord to draw him to any of them or them to him. The next morning passing the house

The next morning passing the house to let he thought that, after all, it would be better than his rooms and he would go in and look at it. At the moment a feminine voice said to him:

moment a feminine voice said to him:
"There doesn't appear to be any word on the notice where to apply."
Jenkins turned and saw a young woman whose appearance was as refined as her voice. Her attention was all directed to the house, and Jenkins believed that she had made the observation to herself rather than to him.
Nevertheless he raised his hat and said:

"Perhaps, there being no such directions, it means that one may inquire "It doesn't matter," said the lady, still making her replies more to herself

"I'm intending to make inquiries for myself, though I have no definite idea of taking a house. I don't need one."

He went up on to the stoop and rang the bell. His summons was answered by a middle aged person who lived in the basement, evidently a caretaker. The lady waited for Jenkins to act as spokesman, but he hesitated. He did not know whether to say "this lady wishes to look at the house." or "I wish to look at the house." The first would be assuming what he had not been authorized to assume: the second been authorized to assume; the second would look as if he proposed to stand in the lady's way. He compromised. "We would like to look at the house,"

"We would like to look at the house," he said.

"Oh! Walk in!"
"There are eight rooms," said the caretaker, leading the way through the apartments. "On this floor parlor, dining room, library and kitchen."
Then, leading them upstairs: "Four bedrooms up here. This front room will make a heartful room for you. will make a beautiful room for you and your wife, sir, and this little room adjoining is just big enough for the children, if you have them. There's another small room back that would

I like the girls best, of course, but little boys are nice, too, especially when they're fine, many little fellows. But in every family there should be both boys and girls." While the woman was running on, unconscious that the picture she was drawing was the unfilled desire of the two people she was talking to, that two people she was talking to, that they were not married and both had they were not married and both had for years wished to be married, especially for the home she had suggested by her remarks upon children, Jenkins was looking at the ceiling, out of the window, any place except where he might be expected to look. Suddenly he turned his eyes upon the lady beside him and saw blushes coming and going like an aurora borealls, with smilles on the lips like smillight on ripples of water. Then their eyes met. The usual happening from such a meeting of eyes under such circumstances might be embarrassment, or it might be half embarrassment and half amusement, or it might be anger. The look between these two was neither of the might be half embarrassment and half amusement, or it might be anger. The Marriage, or rather mating, is a natural instinct. The reason neither of these two had mated was because they had from childhood been surrounded by artificial conditions. He had looked upon a woman critically, judicially, taking time to deliberate whether he wanted her or not—If he could get her—while she had considered the men of her acquaintance in the same fashlon. While all these considerations, pro and con, had falled to make a mating, suddenly a spark had flashed between them and made them one.

Nor does it matter that there was a great deal of the artificial to stand between them and realization. What great deal of the artificial to stand between them and realization. What was to follow was not a process of building up a love, but of breaking down barriers. When they left the house both knew that the artificial condition by which they were surrounded required that they proceed step by step. In one respect they were very near, in another they were far apart. They had pledged a silent troth and yet they were strangers.

"Do you think you will take the on the sidewalk about to part.

"Rather, do you think you'il take it?"

"Suppose," he said, taking out his card, "you send me word as to your decision."

"I will." she replied in a low tone. "I will," she replied in a low tone.
"On second thought, I will not put you to so much trouble. If you will let me know where I could get your

"I should be happy to have you do so." She gave him her address. "Good morning!" "Good morning!"

"Good morning!"

Not a very warm parting for an engaged couple. Nevertheless both went away with satisfaction in their hearts. For the first time in their lives they had listened to the voice of nature unalloyed by artificial conditions.

In a few days Jenkins called upon the caretaker, with whom the renting of the house had been left, with a couple of leases in his pocket and executed one for the owner and another for himself.

"When will you move in, sir?" asked the woman.

"I don't know. I would like to have ns and a great many artificial bar ders to be broken down before there could be the woman was not likely to receive any hurried order. He fully intended to occupy the house with the woman the caretaker supposed was Mrs. Jenkins, but before that a great deal must be done. Not even a word of love had been seaker. What hed of love had been spoken. What had been looked and understood was another matter.

Months passed before the caretaker got her order to do the cleaning. Then werything was made spick and span, and furniture began to arrive. Sometimes there are two or as many as six rows of carriages, some going in the opposite direction and alternating, the ladies smiling and the gentlemen tipping their hats in a polite manner. This promenading lasts from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening.—Logical Point.

A BRILLIANT FOP.

"The youthful orator was now at the height of his dandyism, and his 'curls and ruffles' played no small part in the election. Standing on the top of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of jet black hair and his person plenterously adorned with lace and cambric, he must have seemed to the spectators better fitted for his role of fashionable novelist than for that of strenuous polnovelist than for that of strenuous politician. Great, then, was their surprise when this 'popinjay,' as a hostile newspaper called him, began to pour forth a torrent of eloquence with tremendous energy of action and in a voice that carried far along the High street. He had an instinct for the dramatic effects which hold the attention of the mob. 'When the poll is declared I shall be there,' he exclaimed, according to a Wycombe tradition, pointing to the head of the llon, 'and my opponent will be there,' pointing to the tail. By the admission even of the opposite party the speech was a composite party the speech was a comovelist than for that of strenuous pol tail. By the admission even of the opposite party the speech was a complete success, and his popularity with the crowd was thenceforth assured."

As to the young cartor's appearance at Taunton, Mr. Monypenny gathers these comments of an eyewitness from an almost forgotten book of that time: "Never in my life had I been so struck by a face as I was by that of Disraeli. It was lividly pale, and from beneath two finely arched eyebrows blazed out a pair of intensely black eyes, I never have seen such orbs in mortal sockets either before or since. His physiognomy was strictly Jewish. His physiognomy was strictly Jewish. "There was a sort of half smile, half sneer playing about his beautifully formed mouth, the upper lip of which was curved as we see it in the portraits of Byron. He was very showly attired in a dark bottle green frock coat, a waisteout of the most extravagant pattern, the front of which was almost covered with glittering chains, and in fancy pattern pantaloons. He wore a plain black stock, but no collar was visible. Altogether he was the most intellectual looking exquisite I had ever seen.

His Airs and Graces, His Frills and Laces and His Dazzling Oratory in His Early Political Battles—A Pen Picture of His Remarkable Face.

Benjamin Disraeli's career in practical politics began with a series of reverses that might have discouraged a less persistent fighter. Five times the youthful novellst and versatile budding statesman attempted to break into parliament before he succeeded in winning an election, going down to defent three times at Wycombe and once at Taunton.

In William Flayvelle Monypenny's "Life of Benjamin Disraeli" the author declares that tales are still told in Wycombe of Disraeli's famous first speech from the portico of the Red Llon:

"The youthful orator was now at the height of his dandyism, and his 'curls and ruffles' played no small part in the election. Standing on the top of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of the back hair and his person plenteously adorned with lace and cambric, he must have seemed to the spectators better fitted for his role of fashionable novelist than for that of strenuous politicals. Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, II Chron. xv, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Although Abijah, son of Rehoboam, reigned only three years and walked in all the sins of his father (I Kings xv, 1-3), yet there is in II Chron. xill a remarkable record of a great victory which the Lord gave him over the army of Jeroboam, which was just twice as great as his because he relied upon the Lord God of his fathers. The Lord has often seen fit to do mighty things for very unworthy people for His great name's sake. Jer. xiv, 7, is very strong and effectual pleading.

Our lesson today introduces us to good King Asa, who reigned forty-one years and did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God. He also defeated an army twice as large as his own because he relied on the Lord (xiv, 8, 9; xvi. 8). His prayer in chapter xiv, 11, has often helped me: "Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power. Help us. O Lord our God, for we rest on Thee, and in Thy name we go."

Yet in the thirty-sixth year of his reign he was led into making a league with the king of Syrla, and, being reproved for it by the Cord through His servant Hanani, he became so angry that he put the prophet in prison. He seems never to have got over this reproof of the Lord, for when, three years later, he became diseased in his feet he did not seek the Lord in his affliction.

All the Lord's deallings with His people are intended to bring them nearer on Nov, 1, 1215, the temporary court Motives Which Impelled the Egyp shalow holes screped in the soil iminediately beyond the limits of the narrow strip of cultivated land. As the result of placing the body in hot dry sand it frequently happened that, instead of undergoing a process of decay, it became desiccated and preserved in an incorruptible form for an indefinite time. The burial of valuable and useful objects with the dead naturally led to grave robbing, which was already common in the earliest known prehistoric times in Egypt.

This plundering of graves must have taught the people at large that the forces of nature were often sufficient to preserve a dead body. In this way it became a part of the religion of the Egyptians to regard the preservation of the body as the condition of the attainment of immortality.
The early ligyptians learned that the body when placed in a coffin or buried in a rock tomb usually underwent decomposition. It was a widespread be lief that the stone "ate the flesh"— hence the word "sarcophagus." Arti-

Fortunately I recovered before the hot weather set in and after convalescing in the invigorating climate of the Swiss Alps went to Paris, where I remained some time.

Strolling one day down one of the Parisian boulevards, I stepped into a picture shop. The dealer, fancying to make a customer of me, advanced and questioned me as to what I was looking for. It occurred to me to ask for one of my own pictures, not that I expected to find one, but that to ask for the work of any special artist would make it appear that I was not looking at his wares with no intention of buying.

terpretation of the incident was that, not being able to do good work herself, she had exercised this power over me to utilize my ability. Since she had painted the pictures herself the only fraud involved was her placing my name on them. She did this not realizing the pecuniary value of the pictures themselves and supposed she could not sell them without a name to them. She and her mother were tempted chiefly because they were financially in desperate straits. They had sold the paintings through a friend who appreciated their worth and paid them all they brought except a bare commission. I told them that they were welcome to all they had received for the paintings. The sole interest I took in the matter was a curlosity to know how the work had been executed.

ST. BERNARD DOGS.

Among American tourists in Switze and there is much rivalry for securing "real" St. Bernards to take home with them. They evidently do not know that the St. Bernards are mongrels. The original St. Bernards saw the light toward the end of the fourteenth century. The mother was a Wallis shepherd dog, the sire a mongrel of a Great Dane and a Spanish mountain

In the winter of 1812 nearly all the dogs lost their lives in the snow. In 1816 the last St. Bernard dog died. But a monk of Martingay had a mongrei St. Bernard, and this was crossed with Wallis sheep dogs. Apparently the duke borrowed the scrap of paper from some member of his staff, for on the back of it are the faded items of a tavern bill. He used the parapet of the bridge for a writing desk. He had been seventeen hours in the saddle, most of that time riding in the yery heart of one of the greatest the very heart of one of the greatest battles in all history, yet the letters are firm in shape, a curious testimony to that serenely unshakable temperament that was Marlborough's most striking characteristic.—New York Herald

FRIDAY, JAN. 20, 1911. LODGE ELECTED.

At a joint convention of both branches of the Legislature held at noon on Wednesday, January 18, 1911, Henry Cabot Lodge was reelected to represent Massa. chusetts in the United States Senate for another six years from March 4, 1911, a position he will have filled with marked ability for

The JOURNAL has never had the least doubt from the beginning of the campaign that Senator Lodge chosen a fourth time when the election should take

The vote of the joint assembly was as follows: Whole number of ballots cast, 279; necessary for a choice, 140; Lodge, 146, Whip-ple, 121; Ames, 7; Abbott Lowell 2; John S. Thayer, 1; Curtis Guild, Jr., 1; Sylvester J. Mc-

Antis went over to Lodge.

Had there been no campaign put up for Lodge by overzealous and tion paid to Foss, Lodge would received a larger majority than he did.

There was great rejoicing ove Senator Lodge's victory in Washington, Nahant and Boston.

PEARY TO BE HONORED.

With the single exception of Representative Roberts of Chelsea, who is said to be in influence one of the leanest members of the National House of Representatives, the Committee on Naval Affairs, a few days ago, reported unanimously in favor of the Bill pending in the House to make Captain Peary a Rear Admiral and giving him a Congressional vote of thanks for his discovery of the Northpole, and then retire him with the title and salary of that high office. Prompt consideration and speedy action of the Bill was requested.

It was said that Congressman Roberts, who retired angry when the vote was being taken by the Naval Subcommittee, threatened to submit a minority report. It for he has fought against honoring was a failure. Peary from the start to the close of the work of the Committee last

But Congress will soon give Peary his just dues as Discoverer of the Northpole.

The above named gentleman who represents the 5th Massachusetts District in the National House of Representatives and lives at Lowell, failed to cut any figure worth mentioning in the Senatorial election last Tuesday Senatorial election last and Wednesday, or in the cau-cuses. He has been campaigning against Senator Lodge and in be half of his own candidacy for the position, and spending piles of money to boom it, all the year, but when it came to voting last Wednesday by the Legislature he wasn't in the fight, or any thought he was making headway until Eugene Foss entered the contest to beat Lodge and get his seat and thus spoiled the plans and crushed his hopes.

Congressman Ames's campaign against Lodge, like that of Foss's, originated and was prosecuted i personal spite.

The Porcupine.

Mother Nature surely must have set out to make "something different" the day she invented the porcupine. Here was an animal with a pathetically mild disposition, without cunning or courage and almost as slow and clumsy as a turtle. It would have been absurd to give him weapons of defense; he would never have the energy to attack anything, so he was given a coat of mail in which he might walk abroad among his enemies and yet be as safe as though he were behind a wall of steel. His upper parts, from his nose to the tip of his thick, muscular tail, are covered with a mass of sharp pointed quills intermixed with lar tail, are covered with a mass of sharp pointed quills intermixed with coarse hair. Each quill is provided with a number of minute barbs pointng backward, so that when it is once nserted in the flesh of any animal the nere movement of the muscles will ause it to work deeper and deeper.—

MIGHTY ARCTURUS.

The parallax of a star is its augula posite points on the earth's orbit. The base line employed in this gigantic species of surveying is 185,000,000 miles in length, but the calculation is reduced to the semidiameter of the orbit. The results are at the same time amazing and instructive.

Let us take the famous star Arcturus, often called the "star of Job" because in the Old Testament the Almighty is represented as saying to the unfortunate patriarch, who maintains a certain dignity in spite of his helplessness and his sufferings, "Canst thou call forth Arcturus and his sons?" Many conflicting measures of the duced to the semidiameter of the orbit. The results are at the same time amazing and instructive.

Let us take the famous star Areturns, often called the "star of Job" because in the Old Testament the Almighty is represented as saying to the unfortunate partiarch, who maintains a certain dignity in spite of his helplessness and his sufferings, "Caust thou call forth Arcturus and his sons?"

Many conflicting measures of the parallax of Arcturus have been made, but the latest made at Yale seem more probably correct than their predecessors. They fix the parallax at 0.006 seconds—i. e., sixty-six one-thousandth of a second of arc. From this it is easy to calculate the distance of the star. It comes out at nearly 290,000, 000,000 outles (two hundred and ninety trillion miles). This is more than 3,000,000 times the distance of the earth from the sun.

Having this distance, we can calculate the actual amount of light shed by Arcturus, or, in other words, its actual brightness as compared with that of our sun, on the supposition that both were at the same distance from us. We thus find that Arcturus exceeds the sun as a light giver about 5,000 times. It is a sun 2,500 times.

Put the earth as near to Arcturus as it is to the sun and all life would disappear from its surface as if swept off by a blast of inconceivable heat. The summer temperature would rist to tens of thousands of degrees. The oceans would boil away. Vegetation would be burned up in a twinkling. There would be no comfort for a living world nearer to Arcturus than about 4,000,000,000 miles. If he has planets he must keep them at a respectful distance. And yet nearly 200,000,000,000,000 miles from him we can look into his blazing eye and see only a bright star.

A Chinese Episode and Its Horrible Effect

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press

A whole year passed after Nelson's self again treading an oriental street and rubbing elbows with slant eyed, blue bloused Chinese. His present po sition in the custom bouse made it necessary that he should visit a well known silk importer, whose place of business lay in the heart of San Fran-cisco's reconstructed Chinatown.

Jay Nelson had been glad enough to Jay Nelson had been glad enough to eliuinate all memory of his last year in China. There had been one horri-ble incident from which he had fled, but whose shadow had lurked in the background of his daily life since his return to America. In broad daylight he had laughed at the fears that pursued his first sleepless, fear haunted nights. After awhile the fear gave place to a sense of security fostered by the practical workaday happenings of his busy life.

Today, however, as he passed along Dupont street and turned into a narrower thoroughfare there burst upon him the significant fact that this part of a great city was but a fragment of the old eastern world after all.

He had to pause once or twice and inquire his way, for the house of the importer was set in the heart of the web of streets and alleys. Then when his goal lay but a few yards ahead there sprang into sudden view, bobling along in the crowd before him, a certain green and gold paper parasol. certain green and gold paper parasol the meaning of which was all too clear to Jay Nelson. He had a vague realization that this emblem of an old horror might have been evolved from horror might have been evolved from his own morbid fancy.

He pressed forward, eager to stretch forth his hand and prove that the Japanese unbrella was a thing of air, was an optical illusion. But always it danced before him like a will-o'-the-wisp, now showing a glint of gold and green and then melting into a dozen illusive tints.

Illusive tints.

Where it went there he too must follow until he could prove by actual contact with its surface that it was a creation of his fancy and not the dreaded emblem of the White Brother-

Then the latter awoke from his trance-like state and stared first at the strange face that confronted him, then about the small dungeon-like room, empty of furniture and reeking with foul odors and lighted by a single swinging oil lamp. Nelson's gaze came back to the face of the Chinese, and he shivered salightly, for the face was that of a member of the dreaded order—the sign was written on the man's brow.

Instantly Nelson whipped off his coat, holding it before him as a shield and backed to the stairway leading lupward.

It was Leeson's ambition to clean out the lepers hidden in the city, to root them out from their places of concealment and transport them to the colony where preparations had been made for their segregation, where their cases should be studied and modern methods be employed.

It happened that the afflicted ones looked on the idea of banishment with distaste. They cared little to be herded together in a foreign province far from friends and familiar scenes. They cared nothing whatever for the benefits that might accrue to posterity through their segregation. through their segregation.
Leeson's efforts met with little su

Nelson remembered the first time he had seen them—that night of Leeson's carefully planned expedition into a suspected quarter. It was at night, and red lanterns had lighted the street down its crooked length. Suddenly there had burst upon them and the three agents who accompanied Leeson ree agents who accompanied Leeson hideous babel of cracked voices; a prible spectacle of ghastly faces; a prous mob that leered and jeered at m; that drove them point by point oward the end of the street of lepers; yelling crowd that received the bultoward the end of the street of lepers a yelling crowd that received the bullets from their revolvers and died noisily; a filthy crew that tried to touch them, that longed to render them as loathsome as itself.

Leeson had been killed, and Nelson tried to forget the sight as the rest of them got away. The next day he led a party back to the street, but it was deserted. Even poor Leeson's body had disappeared. After this outbreak the matter went under the supervision of a large medical corps, and the colony at Anam was augmented by several hundred cases. Nelson resigned from the service and went home, siekened of the whole dubions web of oriental life, thankful that he had escaped contact—that he was clean.

Now they had found him out they would take their revenge for his betapal of their outbreak. It pleased them to call him by Leeson's name. bine to subscribe for one paper, which is then read by each in turn. The one who gets it first pays a little more than the later readers, and each may than the later readers, and each may keep it for a stipulated time—an hour or perhaps two or three hours or half a day. In this way it is generally only the "head of the house" who gathers in any information. He monopolizes the paper as soon as it comes and keeps it as long as he can. The other men.

Many cigar shops and sometimes other stores have what they call "depots" of newspapers, and there you can also "rent" a paper and take it home with you for a certain length of time for very little money indeed.

But the longing for information of the average Dutchman of the middle classes extends far beyond the daily papers. He wishes to know all about his neighbors far and near, and at the same time he wants to keep up his knowledge of the languages learned at school. For these purposes reading the cost of what they imbibe. Nelson determined to force some immediate action from the men who had sprung up in this faraway city to call him to account for his setting the hounds of law upon their trail. All his hideons dreams of the past year seemed to have been realized in the strange events of this day that would undoubtedly be his last on earth. It had been a strange day, and even now, face to face with death—for the presence of these White Brothers meant nothing less—he seemed to be moving in a dream more frightful than anything his sleeping mind had conceived.

Easy to Restore Tarnished Pieces te Original Freshness.

"Very few people know that furniture ought to be washed," said a salesman in the furniture section of a large department store. "Yet," he continued, "it is the best thing one can do to keep furniture looking as well as it should. One should take a bucket of tepid rainwater and make a suds with a good pure soap. Then with a soft piece of cheesecloth all the woodwork should be washed. It is astonishing how much dirt will come off. A second piece of cheesecloth should be wrung dry out of hot water. On this should be poured a tablespoon of first class furniture poilsh. The heat will spread the polish through the cloth. Next the furniture should be gone over with the second should be gone over with the second cloth. There will be no need of putting on more polish, for that much will do all one needs. Too many persons make the mistake of using too much make the mistake of using too much polish and leaving it thick on the furni-ture, where it looks dauby and where it gathers more dirt."

There is furniture in homes today that is cast off because of its appear-ance when it might be brought back to its original freshness by this simple process of washing. Many persons do not know that a fine bit of mahogany is improved by careful washing and is improved by careful washing, and hundreds of planos have never been more than dusted in years. A square of cheesecloth for the washing and another for the polishing will do the work, and the result will well repay the effort—Indianacolis News other for the polishing will work, and the result will wel the effort.—Indianapolis News.

"Few persons are aware that they habitually swallow hot liquids, tea especially, at a temperature which if applied to the hands or feet would inflict painful scalds. Most tea drinkers take it about 140 to 145 degrees E, which the mouth bears very well if slowly sipped, while the cup itself is too hot to be held by any hand.
"But the habit of swallowing such

"But the habit of swallowing such tea is injurious to the stomach, and it ought not to be taken above 130 degrees or so. Again, water at 120 degrees, which feels a little more than lukewarm in the mouth, causes severe pain if the hand is dipped in it and cannot be endured."

He has, however, some good words to say for the early morning tea.

"This morning tea in any case should be taken at least an hour and a half before the first meal of the day. For many years I have been accustomed to write for an hour every morning in bed after tea, as I am doing at this "But the habit of swallowing such

What a record of increasing iniquity and how great the long suffering of Jehovah that could bear with it! But we must consider that ever since the serpent tempted Eve, and how much longer we do not know, God has patiently borne with the devil and will continue to bear with him till the time of Rev. xx, 1-3. While there is no hope for that great adversary revealed in Scripture, as to men it is written that the Lord is long suffering toward that the Lord is long suffering toward us, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to re

During the forty-one years of the reign of Asa over Judah, who was on the whole a good king and most of the time did right in the sight of the Lord, six of the kings of the ten tribes either reigned or began to reign, and each one is mentioned by name in connection with the year of Asa's reign when he began to reign (xy, 25, 28, 33; xyl, 8, 10, 15, 23, 29). No less than eight times do we find Asa mentioned in connection with the names of these kings, and it is to me suggestive of the wheat and tares of one of our Lord's parables, concerning which He said, "Let both grow together till the harvest." In this case it was not difficult to the said of the sa

Today we are introduced to two of the tent tribes, Omri and Ahab. Of the former it is written that he wrought evil in the eyes of the Lord and did worse than all that were before him, and of the latter it is written that he did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him, and of the latter it is written that he did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him and did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel that.

The Double Tragedy

By MILLARD MALTBIE

tunately there was very little time to discover them. Webster relied on his pretended hatred of the government to secure his initiation into the inner circle. His ruse succeeded. He was livited to go to the house of the captain of the company, but not to say a word about the invitation. In a room every window of which was protected against hearing and seeing from the outside he met men from the central point of the conspiracy, Baltimore, and was received as one of the planners of the work to be done.

Seated about a table, the party discussed different methods of assassinating the president elect. Webster, being a new man and of a reserved disposition, listened to the others, only occasionally pointing out some weak spot in a proposition or suggesting a way to obviate it. Before the conference broke up it had been decided to shoot Mr. Lincoln at the depto as he was passing through Baltimore on the 23d of March.

Webster now had the plans in his possession. Taking himself away from the so called cavalry company, he went where he could safely communicate with bis chief, Allan Plakerton. On the night of the 21st of February Pinkerton met Mr. Lincoln at the Conference on the could safely communicate with bis chief, Allan Plakerton. On the night of the 21st of February Pinkerton met Mr. Lincoln at the Conference on the other than the conference of the conference he went where he could safely communicate with bis chief, Allan Pinkerton. On the night of the 21st of February Pinkerton met Mr. Lincoln at the Continental hotel at Philadelphia and revealed the plot.

The question now arose how, having the plan, to defeat it. A ruse was adopted. Instead of going on to Washington direct, Mr. Lincoln was taken northwest to Harrisburg. But it was no easy job to turn the gaze of millions of people from the most prominent figure in the land with hosts of newspaper correspondents watching his every movement. The telegraph where leading out of Harrisburg were secretly grounded, thus cutting off that city from the rest of the world.

nent figure in the land with hosts of newspaper correspondents watching his every movement. The telegraph wires leading out of Harrisburg were secretly grounded, thus cutting off that city from the rest of the world.

Mr. Lincoln now being able to travel without news of his passage being telegraphed from every station, a private train was made up at Harrisburg, and the president elect—it is said that he was disguised—was taken back to Philadelphia and at midnight of the 22d instead of the 23d, as had been arranged, was rushed through Baltimore and early the next morning arrived and early the next morning arrived safe in Washington. This brief statement of the plan to

This brief statement of the plan to assassinate the president elect and its defeat is essential to the story—a story of Abraham Lincoln as the central figure and Timothy Webster, whose quick work was instrumental in saving him for the great work he was to accomplish. It would have been well had the president kept Webster by him until, his task having been fintshed, he should return to the less dantshed, he should return to the less dan-rerous field of private life. But Webcould not have brooked four s of comparative idieness. Becars of comparative idleness. Beidles, there was a continued need for is services. The only railroad thorughfare between the northern Atlanic states and the capital was continuily threatened. Indeed, there was no afety on any line connecting the capiul with the rest of the country. Even ispatches were not safe in transit, the first work done by Webster after conspirators was to carry some imporispirators was to carry some Impor-tip papers through to the president-ebster found the rallroad bridges need by the secessionists. Taking route through Hayre de Grace, ere a long bridge was destroyed, he is rowed across the river and hired ragion to take him onward. He was iged to pass through Perrymans-e, and the wagon was stopped by rille, and the wagon was stopped by the cavalry company in which Web-ster had enlisted for a spy. He was rec-gnized, but fortunately for him the fact that he had revealed their plot to the overnment was not known to them. Webster traveled on in company There are many stories in the life of Abraham Lincoln. Probably no man ever lived who was connected with more romances. But in them all there is something said. It was a period of war in which these events of which he was the central figure occurred, and only a very few of the romances extracted from war have happy terminations. No one can look upon the portrait of Abraham Lincoln without seeing there the solemnly of those four taking off his coat and vest, ripped

The last event of similarity between Mr. Lincoln and Webster occurred three years later, when Mr. Lincoln was again the object of the assassin's bullet. The double tragedy contains two singular coincidences. Both died for the cause, though neither of them as a soldier, and both died tragic deaths, one being hanged for a spy, the other murdered.

In the eastern haif of Bavaria, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, on the borders of Bohemia, lies the so called Bavarian forest. This part of the country, aithough it boasts beautiful scenery, is seldom visited by tourists, probably for the reason that the charms of the region are little known even in Germany. This part of Bavaria has been in many ways untouched by civilization, and owing to its seclusion from the outer world some very strange customs are still in vogue, strongly reminding one of the middle

CATTLE BUREAU.

Even though he is not a Veter-Chief of the Massachusetts Cattle Bureau has correctly diagnosed several of the ailments afflicting that Department of the State's affairs, and proposed remedial measures which ound practical and businesslike.

One need only contemplate the statistical facts concerning the appalling decrease in the herds of Massachusetts to realize that there must be a radical change from the wholly veterinary management heratofore rampant, unless the speedy and complete extermina-tion of the Massachusetts cow is the result desired. Certain investigations into the milk problems, not long ago, revealed the interesting fact that milk 72 hours old was being received and consumed by many of us, while the nearby natural sources of a plentiful and fresh milk supply (our own Massachusetts farmers) were being forced out of the field. Chief Walker suggests that this is a strangely inconsistent conditionwhich it certainly is-and in his recent report he outlines his own policy as one which seeks to improve these conditions along lines, not destructive only, but of creatof persecution and prosecution, but of practical, restorative helpfuluess. He would see the green pastures of Massawhich are now tenantchusetts, less, restored. He suggests simple, reasonable and convincing means by which many existing problems hitherto ignored, may be solved. Mr. Walker possesses an admittedly accurate, practical knowledge of work which should be entrusted to the Chief of the Cattle Bureau. He recognizes fully the need of medical experts for certain phases of that work, and has, at all times, the assistance of as many such as the needs of the Department re quire, selected, however, with re-

RULE OF THE ROAD.

Decided Abroad by the Sword and Here by the Gun.

Several travelers were seated in the hotel lobby discussing the difference in customs of the various countries they had visited. "What struck me as most peculiar abroad," said one, "is the custom of keeping to the left instead of the right, as we do here. Why is the rule reversed?"

"I think I can explain that," said a reserved looking man in the corner, "In medieval and later periods abroad men were in the custom of wearing swords. The sword was worn, as it is now, on the left side. Consequently in drawing their weapon it was done with the right hand, and to get quickly upon guard a man had to have his right side to his opponent; hence the custom of keeping to the left.

round table and an organ made in Brattleboro, Vt. Our host produced the usual box of sound and with it a box of good cigars.

The host and hostess then showed us all over the house. It is a turf structure and is typical of the older farmhouses, with narrow, dark, win dowless corridors winding in labyrinthlan maze from room to room. One passageway leads to a large open mound where a fire is made to smoke meat and fish and incidentally the whole house and everything in it. Another passage leads to another kitchen with a modern stove. The walls are all of turf, as is the roof, with just enough driftwood in the roof to make a framework to hold it in place. Very steep stairs lead up to the badstofa, or sleeping apartment. The badstofa frequently forms the sitting and common workroom of the family, especially in winter, as well as the sleeping room of the entire household.

Bunks built into the wall extend around the room and are often filled with seawed or feathers, over which is thrown a fold or two of wadmal and a thick coveriet of elderdown. The floors are sometimes covered with boards, but more often consist of damp fearth. From the ceiling are suspended

STORY OF A LOAN.

"What can I do for you?" asked the

"Well," replied the southerner,
"about thirry-five years ago I loaned a man down south some money—not a very big sum. I told him that whenever I should need it I would let him know and he could pay me the money.
I need some money now, so I shall let him know, and I would like to have er, "you have no claim on that money You can't hold that man to that loan.

You can't hold that man to that loan. You say it has been thirty-five years since you loaned it to him? The statute of limitations has run against that loan years and years ago." "Sir," replied the southerner, "the man to whom I loaned that money is a gentleman. The statute of limitations never runs against a gentleman." So the banker sent for the money, and within a reasonable time thereafter the money came. There was a courtly gentleman at the other end of the transaction also. — Kansas City Journal.

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

Splendid Horsemen, but They Use Their Spurs Without Mercy.
The perfection of Spenish horsemenship is to be seen among the vaqueros, ganaderos and garrochistas, by which various names the mounted herdsmen of the Andalusian plains are known—in brief, what we should call a cowboy. Every farm seems to maintain a large number of these, for each herd, dock or drove has its own herdsman, goatherd or swineherd, as the case may be. The vaqueros are a fine looking lot of men. Tall, thin, light and loosely made, they look ideal horsemen, as, in point of fact, they are though their mounts are poor.

The vaquero rides very high on a district of the company curb, but he has such beautiful hands that, although using this barbarous bit, he never cuts his horse's mouth about. It is different with the animal's sides, however, for he uses his spurs without mercy, and the white horses—of which there are a large number—all have ominous red stains behind the girths.

All the herdsmen who look after cattle carry a long lance, called a garrocha, of thick and heavy wood, which, except when standing still, they always carry "in rest" and not "at the carry," presumably on account of its great length and possibly its weight. With this weapon, in the use of which he acquires amazing dexterity, the garrochista is able to control the most unruly brutes in the herd, not excepting the savage fighting buil.—Wide World Magazine.

Trees and Wind.

The effect of wind upon trees is powerful. Even the presence or absence of forests may be determined by the character of the prevailing wind or the conditions that modify it. The wind acts as a drying agent, giving a special aspect to many plants. When it is falmost always from the same quarter the plants show greater development upon one side. Trees are smaller on the windward edges of forests are smaller on the windward edges of forests, and trunks and branches are bent to leeward. The deformations are most marked near the sea or in a flat regions. The cherry, plum, walls nut, black poplar, ash and certain fire pines are very sensitive to the wind, but mountain pines and certain fire all offer great powers of resistance, and offer great powers of resistance, and these are recommended for reforesting wind swept lands.

Your Watch Ideal

Many people have learned to consider such and such a watch as an ideal timepiece. When they buy they want that particular watch. We don't blame them because we have watch ideals too—and ideal watches. They are the Hamilton and the Illinois and one or two others. These we have learned to depend upon—these we buy and sell each year in greater quantities. And before you make a watch purchase we would like to talk to you about these movements.

A Goat and a Valentine

Drusilla Fowler detested the Franklins' pet goat, for it had all but devastated her small domain during the summer. Flower beds had been trampled, shrubs uprooted, and, as for the little kitchen garden near the orchard, the succulent heads of lettuce and later the hard cabbage balls had fallen victims to the insatiable appetite of Billy the goat.

Of course the Franklins were very sorry about it and tried to confine Billy within a hastily constructed fence, but that sagacious and resourceful animal had viewed the structure of wood and wire with a contemptuous eye before he utterly demolished it and resumed his invasion of Drusilla's garden. Drusilla hated him, and

This crisp February morning Drusilla came to the glass door that led from her sitting room into the south porch, and, standing there bathed in the sunlight, she planned her garden for the coming year.

Now, Drusilla in her mind's eye could see the beds blooming once more with roses and pinks and sweet williams, phlox and marigolds and mignonette, while the bailled Billy peered through the palings.

Little Bessie Franklin ran through her own yard waving an envelope familically. "Oh, mother," Drusilla heard her shout, "somebody has sent me a valentine!"

me a valentine!

So this was St. Valentine's day. Drusilla's red lips pressed into a thin red line as she remembered that there was one other thing in the world she detested as heartily as she did the goat Billy, and that was St. Valentine's day. The hot color flew to her cheeks as she recalled events which had happened ten years before and which had thereafter made that anniversary a detestable day.

She had not been engaged to Gregory Ware, but on the 13th of February Gregory had said to her that there was something to be settled between them. "You'll know tomorrow, Drusilla, and you'll believe what you get, won't you?" he had whispered in an was one other thing in the world she won't you?" he had whispered in an agony of embarrassment, for Gregory was the shiest man in the world.

And Drusilla had guessed that he was to confess his love in a valentine, was to confess his love in a valentine, and she was radiant with happiness, for she would joyfully believe anything he might say to her in the tender missive. So she had told him shyly that she would see what it said and so put him off while her heart was beating wildly.

Then the next day had come, and there was no valentine, and the next and the next, and it had never come. Drusilla had grown very stiff and hurt, and Gregory had never come to ask an all.

So Drusilla always avoided going to the postoffice on Valentine's day that she might evade even the appearance of being interested in the anniversary of the good saint. But today—and she frowned as she recollected it—there was a matter of sending a money order to the city that must be attended to, for an impecuations coustn ed to, for an impecunious cousin had written and asked for a loan to tide over a financial difficulty. Dru silla Fowler was not a shirker where duty presented itself, and so she swal duty presented itself, and so she swal-lowed her repugnance and buttoned herself into a thick warm cleak and pinned on her most becoming hat, for Drusilla had pride in her appearance. Her adventures began from the very moment she passed out of her own yard into the street. The Franklins' goat was hungrily browsing on the privet hedge that surrounded his mas-ter's yard, and as he turned his little evil eye on Drusilla she involuntarily

Billy wheeled about on the pivot of his hind legs, reared himself menac-ingly, dropped his head and made one dive after Drusilla Fowler. But she had gone. With the speed of an antelope she had picked up the skirts of her long cloak and darted down the street, the angry goat leaping after her with increasingly swift gait.

Men dashed to head him off and dodged his threatening horns; women screamed and took to the opposite side of the street; children scattered like above.

side of the street; children scattered like chaff until there only remained on the long street the flying red cloak-ed form of Drusilla Fowler and the plunging gray conted Billy after her. The first building into which she might safely turn was the postoffice. It stood at the corner of the main street and the road that ran to the The doors were usually wide open even in this wintry weather, and there would be friendly hands to help ther in and to close the portals against the invasion of Billy. Once she glanced behind and saw his waving gray whiskers and the glitter of his evil eye

At last the postoffice. Drusilla dashed across the street up the wide stone steps and reached the top as the frenzied gont clattered his hoofs on the

He pawed the floor an-grily; he bleated once more, and then before the horrified onlookers could prevent him he bent his head and crashed violently into the glass front, shattering it in a thousand flying frag-ments and toppling the whole struc-ture on to the startled postmistress and her assistant. and her assistant.

She opened the missive with shaking fingers and drew from within a lacy and flowered valentine. Wreaths of roses and forgetmenots surrounded two loving hearts, and underneath was a printed verse that was heavily underscored in ink:

While I protest my heart is thine
I would inquire if thine is mine.
If this be true pray give a sign To say you'll be my valentine.

And the name of Gregory Ware was signed to it, and the date was ten years ago! Drusilla stared at it until all the coldness had fled from her eyes and a great tenderness invaded her face. Ashamed to lift her betraying giance to his serious inquiring one, she pressed the valentine with unconsclous grace to her heart.

"I want to be," sighed Drusilla contentedly, and then later she added, "Who would have thought that goat of Franklin's would prove a blessing in disguise?"

Little River folk watched agape, and nobody but those two understood why Gregory Ware and Drusilla Fowler led the Franklins' pet goat home with such solicitude or why Gregory bught it afterward and changed its name to Valentine. Valentine.

"It can browse in the south meadow. He'll make a nice playmate—for some body—some day," he added vaguely.

"Exercise and Rest."
What is the relation between exercise and rest? Work is that at which we must continue, whether interesting or not, whether we are tired or not. It used to be thought that the prime requisite of rest was the use of faculties other than those involved in the labor of the day. But there is such a thing as fatigue which goes deeper than daily work. We can work so hard as to become exhausted—too exhausted for any kind of work. Perhaps this is will fatigue. It is coming to be regarded as fundamentally true that rest from such fatigue demands to be regarded as fundamentally true that rest from such fatigue demands continuity; that, for example, four periods of fifteen minutes each of rest is not the equivalent of one hour's rest; that a man who goes on a vacation and takes half an hour of his business work every day is doing the same thing as the man who had a horse with a sore back. He kept the sadden on only a few minutes each day, but the sore did not have a chance to heal. Rest periods must be sufficiently consecutive to overcome consecutive fasecutive to overcome consecutive fatigue.—Luther H. Gulick in North American Review.

Cheerfulness and Cholera.

A cheerful disposition is held by some doctors to be the best protection against cholera. When this disease first visited Paris in 1832 a notice was some doctors to be the best protection against cholera. When this disease first visited Paris in 1832 a notice was issued advising the inhabitants "to avoid as far as possible all occasions of melancholy and all painful emotions and to seek plenty of distractions and amusements. Those with a bright and happy temperament are not likely to be stricken down." This advice was largely followed, and even when cholera was claiming over a thousand weekly victims the theaters and cafes were thronged. The epidemic was in some quarters treated as a huge joke, and plays and songs were written around it. Rochefort wrote a play, "Le Cholera Morbus," which proved a big success, and another production on the same lines, "Paris-malade," also had a long run,—London Chronicle.

The Head of the domestic supremacy had come up for settlement, and it must be settled bils way.

He ordered his dinner at the club and when it was served went into the dining room and ate it alone—that is, he ate a few mouthfuls; he couldn't eat any more. His wife would know where to find him, and if she wanted him very badly she would telephone for him. Then he would insist on an apology and a promise never to do so any more. After that he would go home and forgive her. It might be a good lesson for her if she would be very fill in consequence of her stupid, obstinate defiance of his order not to invite pneumonia. At one moment he almost wished this would happen; at the next he was in terror lest it should. Dinner over, he sauntered out into be for them. Then Sam called a halt to look practically at the future. He was not a man to drift through life; he preferred to preurrange everything. It seemed that there was a great ocean ahead of him and Theo, of comfort or suffering, of anxiety or discord, of contentment or unhappiness, and across this great the waster that the summons he desired he crushed back a distribution.

But he wouldn't yield.

By 9 o'clock he was in despair. He concluded that if he didn't get a message from Theo before 10 he would go home and upstairs to a room by him-

"They will get on without you. I forbid your going."

"Oh. I couldn't possibly stay at home. I'll wrap up well, wear my rubbers and keep dry. There's not a bit of danger."

Martindale sat with his morning paper on his lap, looking fixedly at his wife, while she continued to put on her belongings with as much sang froid as if she had not heard the command of her lord and master. When she was ready she took up an umbrella, bent over her husband, kissed him and went out.

BURNING OF WIDOWS.

Horrible Rite India Maintained The Horrible Rite India Maintained For Over Twenty Centuries.

The abolition of the horrid rite of vidow burning in India was decreed by the British authorities in 1829.

The dreadful practice was found there by the Macedonians under Alexander the Great 300 years before Christ, and for more than twenty-one long, weary centuries did it repeat its almost inconceivable torture and agony upon the women of India. The sacrifice, while not actually forced on the wife, was so strongly insisted on by public opinion that it amounted to a law, and its victims were legion. Scores of widows were often burned upon the funeral pile of a single rath. In Record I.

As a Rule They Are Clean, but

When They Do Get Into Their Houses Their Principal Occupation Is Look

Home life in Greece, particularly in thens, is peculiar. It might almost be said that there is no such thing. In Mr. Duckett Ferriman's book on "Greece and the Greeks" the manners and customs of the picturesque Hellenes, which are little known to the average English reader, are described at length. Mr. Ferriman states that he Greeks do not know anything bout the art of making a home.

Pretty Big Sometimes, but Then There Is Another Point of View.

I have a warm spot in my heart for the big American surgeons, says a writer in the New York Telegraph, and because of regular attendance for years at some of the most famous clinics in this and other cities I have been a witness of their unadvertised charities—acts of mercy and kindness which were never heard of outside the walls of the hospitals they honor by their gervices.

or the hospitals they honor by their services.

I knew a wealthy man whose daughter was suddenly stricken and whose life was saved by the attending surgeon. His fee was $25,000. Straightway the father emitted a wail.

"It's robbery," he said. The surgeon stood firm.

"Your daughter's life is worth $25,000 to you," he countered. There was no denial.

"Well, this fee means that I can operate on fifty persons without any charge, and if you don't like it you can force me to sue, but I will get it without a suit or you will stand a lot without a suit or you will stand a lot

And he got the money without recourse to a court of law.

It is safe to mark it down when you see a story of some great surgech who has charged a high fee that there are many of his patients enjoying good health and relief from pain because he charged them nothing at all.

Every year before the feast of the Nativity of Our Lady-Sept. 8—these mystic yews are clipped, and the Sunday "in the octave" thus becomes "Clipping Sunday." A Washington Birthday Story  in the chill light of the February day. The gray clouds lowered over its mossy roof, and the naked eims creak-ed dismally in the bitter wind. The small porch was on a line with the fence and the land stretched away in the rear—gnarled old fruit trees, acres of wornout pasturage and line of dark cedars against the hori-

Anstin Ely and his bride descended from the station stage that had brought them to the steps of their future home. Their trunks were dumped in the small porch, the box of supplies that Austin had prepared ere they left the city stood at the door and the stage rolled away with the driver peering curiously back at them over his fur clothed shoulder.

Austin loaked up and down the lone by road with its scattering of equally dismal houses and shivered. He bent down and gathered his wife into his strong young arms. "Dorothy, dear, swood displation" and that he will broll chickens for us. Make haste, my man."

Austin planted his feet firmly in the dorway, "it's a cold night and you are welcome to come in and have a rewelcome to come in and have a rewelcome to come in and some applejack."

The four entered with noisy hilarity, and it was plain to be seen that they were all in a state of semi-intoxication. They were well dressed men, and their faces were not unpleasing, though more than one of them showed strong young arms. "Dorothy, dear,

Dorothy placed her gloved hand over his lips. "I won't hear a word against your Uncle Bob's legacy. Just think of owning and occupying the oldest house in the state! Why, tradition says George Washington slept here once when it was the best known tavern on the post road. Do get out that huge brass key and let us go in. It is bitterly cold out here!"
Austin brought out the key and thrust it in the lock. "If you had only let me come on ahead and open up the old place, Dorothy—lave it partly furnished and a warm fire for you"—"Tut, tut!" admonished Dorothy, crowding into the narrow hall in his wake. "You know very well I'm perfectly crazy over old houses, and I would never forgive you if you denied me the pleasure of rummaging out the old stuff in this place. Her husband forced up the small paned windows and threw back the beavy wooden shutters, letting in the cold light of day. It was a long low room, the walls hung with an ancient striped paper. The furniture was very old, and its possession would have made a collector wild with joy. A pair of long settles, a large mahogany butfet, a great round table to match with the accompanying chairs, were placed on the wide polished boards now covered thickly with dust. "This is not an inn," said Austin brusquely. "You will find a very good one at the end of this street."

"Nay, 'Its not so," corrected the other. "Many's the time I have sate here in the bar of the Bue Boar and styped my glass o' toddy. Come in. streed my glass o' toddy. Come in, boys; landlord says all are welcome and that he will broll chickens for us.

With the impression that the sooner he served these unwelcome guests the earlier he would be rid of their doubtful companionship, Austin beckoned Dorothy into the kitchen and together they concocted a tray full of refreshments that were mostly got from the provision box. Everything is liable to be misunderstood, even gymnastic exercises. This truth was brought home to George H. Hepworth, and he tells his esperience in "Through Armenia on Horseback."

Austin crammed on his wilg just in time to see his wife's rosy face beaming at him from under the whiteness of the other. Simultaneously they bent in stately greefing.

"Good morrow, Mistress Washing ton," said Austin mischlevously.

"Ah, Mr. Washington!" Dorothy dipped a splendid courtesy and suddenly turned to the chest. "Oh, let us put on these perfectly gorgeous garments. Austin. We might as well enjoy ourselves until the man brings the coal." Dorothy slipped into a blue brocade, admired the towering mass of white curls above her forehead and waited while Austin arrayed himself in the same manner. "We are fright fully foolish. I know," she said, rather wearily, 'but I simply must do something interesting or I shall be horribly homesick tonight."

"Then let us go down and eat our supper in these things," suggested Austin hastily. "Don't be homesick, Dorothy; please don't, or I shall be tempted to weep on your shoulder and throw up the chicken business altogether."

Dorothy paused before him, looking very lovely in her ancient garb, her

His Quarrel With Turgeneff and the Reconciliation That Followed.

Raymond Recouly in the Paris Flarer gives the following account of an early encounter between Tolstoy and Turgeneff, which shows the Russian sage in a different frame of mind from the one in which the world has since come to know him:

It was on the estate of his friend, the poet Fet, near Yasnaya. Turgeneff was among the invited guests. The hostess inquired after his daughter, who was being reared in France. Turgeneff spoke highly of his English governess. "With a truly British exactitude," he said, "she requested me to fix the sum which my daughter might spend for charity. And now she teaches her pupil to mend the ragged clothes of the poor."

"And you consider that a good thing?" asked Tolstoy.

"And you consider that a good thing?" asked Tolstoy.
"Certainly," replied the other. "It brings the benefactor into direct contact with the persons whom he is helping."

"On my part, I think that a well dressed child who handles dirty and helping."

"On my part, I think that a well dressed child who handles dirty and ill smelling rags is playing a hypocritical and theatrical farce."
"I must ask you not to speak in this way," exclaimed Turgeneff, with menacing looks.
"Why should I not say what I am convinced is the truth?" remarked Tolstoy.
"You think, then, that I am educating my daughter badly," and, while Fet was interceding, "If you will talk in that way I shall box your ears." Then he left the room, begging his hosts to pardon his abrupt departure.
Tolstoy also went, At the neighboring station he wrote to Turgeneff demanding an apology. He ordered pistois and tried to provoke his rival to a duel. Turgeneff's answer, very dignified, brought the apology demanded by Tolstoy. He closed by saying that he thought it best that two men with such opposite tempers should hence forth break off all relations. Tolstoy, carried away by his anger (it was in 1861). declined to be sattled with forth break off all relations. Tolstoy, carried away by his anger (it was in 1861), declined to be satisfied with such an answer. He felt that he had been gravely offended. He demanded reparation by arms. He therefore repeated his provocations. His friend Fet, who attempted to pacify him, succeeded only in drawing from him this vigorous reply: "I beg of you henceforth not to write to me any more. I shall return your letters un. henceforth not to write to me any more. I shall return your letters un opened, the same as I do with Turgeneff's." After these occurrences Turgeneff returned to France, where he passed the greater part of his time Some months later, on reflection, Tol stoy regretted his violence. Seized with remorse, he sent Turgeneff a let ter asking his pardon, "I find it exceedingly painful," he wrote, "to think that I have made an enemy of you."

Turgeneff forgave, as one may imagine, but the complete and definitive reconciliation took place much later.

"Let's have a fire at once," suggested Dorothy engerly. "We can make this room our headquarters till we are settled."

"It will be fine and dandy when spring comes," said Austin dubiously, "but I don't know what you're going to do in the meantime, Dorothy. Here it is the 22d of February, and April is a long way off. Won't you be lonely?" Dorothy smiled away his wistful glance. "Lonely where you are?" she said. "And, besides, think of all the chickens we're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the money you're going to raise and of all the summer with your egs and your broilers."

"If wo only had $300," he sighed, "everything would come out all right."

Planning For

found there besides Mr. Marbury a man in clerical dress, an aristocratic looking gentleman, very stiff and reserved, who didn't deign to look at me, and my bride. It was all right for the others to treat the matter as a mere legal form, but the bride and bridegroom gave each other a quick look. I defy any man upon entering into such an arrangement to avoid beginning at once to play a game of hearts. At any rate, I did, and, always having found indifference to be the most powerful force to move a woman, I refrained from looking at Miss Townsend after the first glance. I cast my eye perfunctorily over the papers I was required to sign and, drawing my pen through the words "five hundred dollars," wrote "one."

"What do you mean by that, sir?" snarled the elderly gentleman.

"I have decided, somewhat late perhaps, that to accept money for such a service would demean me. I shall be happy to serve the young lady, but not for pay."

I was obliged to stand a good deal of abuse from the elderly gentleman, in which his ward took no part. But dummy it didn't matter who he was, provided he was not already married. I also said that the one dollar paid me made the marriage a matter of bargain. There were reasons why a man who had been recommended as one to be relied on should be chosen. So after considerable discussion and a side conference between Mr. Marbury and the uncle it was decided to accept my conditions. Standing before the clergyman, Miss Townsend and I were made legal man and wife.

Miss Townsend was apparently well pleased with me so far as appearance goes and was decidedly prejudiced in my favor by fmy firmness in refusing to take any pay for the service.

I announced my decision to Mr. Marbury and he told me the marriage would take place at the office the next day about 10 o'clock. Before going to my wedding I put on a frock coat and stuck a flower in my buttonhole; but, thinking this would appear as though I changed to my business suit and threw away the flower.

At 10 o'clock sharp I received a summons to go to Mr. Marbury's office. I found there besides Mr. Marbury and man in clerical dress, an aristocratic looking gentleman, very stiff and reserved, who didn't deign to look at me, and my bride. I had many conferences with my wife on the subject of our divorce without finding a satisfactory plan. At last one evening when we were debating the matter at the door, just before my departure, in a fit of absentmindedness I klesed her. She must have been equally absentminded, for she received the kless as a matter of she received the kless as a matter of course, not stopping in what she was

"There is one reward," I said to her, "that I would accept for becoming your provisional husband if you can find it in your heart to grant it to me."

The uncle knit his brow, and my wife waited to hear more.

"I have taken upon myself," I said, "a condition that will doubtless prevent me from marrying a real wife for a long while to come, and few girls care to marry a divorced man. I have done this to assure to you a fortune. It seems to me that the reward I nak, though to me it will serve as a pleasant memory connected with this episode, will not be much for you to grant. I ask one kiss from my provisional bride."

Her uncle made a step forward to interfere. My wife stood for a moment irresolute, with her eyes fixed on the floor, then slowly turned her face toward me. The movement was all lasked for. I bent forward and barely touched her lips with mine.

It was during one of his busiest mornings, with long list of singing lessons to be got arough, that a knock came at the cor of Tosti's flat. His valet was ill, and so Tosti went to the door himself. A lady, a stranger to him, stood of he threshold.

"Tosti followed, protesting. After a long argument, which threatened to become heated, the lady snapped out: "Very well; I shan't sing your song.

place called Chite City, Tzuchan, which was reached after a hazardous fourney through the Ping mountains.

He says:

"Let me give a brief history of this strange race, who for centuries have defied the most persistent research of explorers and ethnologists. Many centuries ago, in the vicinity of Shanghai, there lived a highly enlightened race known as the Chites. They were the most fanatical and bigoted Buddhists, so fanatical, in fact, that their turbulent spirits and eager desire to sow the seed of proselytism caused frequent revolutionary disturbances. The government, as its only means of salvation, made war on them. For years the Chites bartled against overwhelming odds until at last, their numbers fearfully reduced, they gradually retired to the west, settling here and there, only of wanderings they located in the wild entirely aloof from their more civilized Chinese neighbors, and today they are as untamed and barbarous as were their flerce ancestors. Many of them are savages of the worst degree; even cannibalism is said to be prevalent among many of them. They acknowledge no allegiance to the emperor, entirely ignore the authority of the mandarins and hold no communication with the outside world. Yet we have visited their wild domain: we have visited their wild domain; we have penetrated into their stronghold and penetrated into their stronghold and have witnessed their strange customs. MAINE HARD HIT.

If the Canadian Reciprocity agreement goes through Congress in its present shape it will prove to be a serious blow to the prosperity of Maine. The staple products of Maine and those chiefly depended on for its private and public revenues are lumber, hay, potatoes and fish (wild animals and summer visitors are purposely omitted,) each one of which is to admitted to this country from Canada duty free.

Heretofore a judicious tariff has made it possible for Maine to thrive on the production of these staples and wax rich and independent; but with protection removed and an open door given to the Kanucks what will become of the lumbermen, haymakers, fishermen, and Aroostook County with its immense potato business?

But Maine, by pure accident, is a Democratic free trade State just at present, and no objection will probably be made by her citizens to defeat the Canada cheme for free exchange of products with the U.S.

While the new rates serve an excellen purpose in many respects, and offer a number of distinct advantages, the fact remains that they involve an increase it cost to some telephone users.

It is easy to understand why this is self-epidemic for another, leaving behind therefailties and friends with whom the wish to keep in touch. This intimacy is maintained by telephone. Under the nex schedule, many of these suburban call would cost 10 or 15 cents, and such suffered with which were paying before or else restrict the number of their calls.

The telephone company apparently has play that ever played at reasonable prices in the history of Boston theatricals. If you happen to have a friend in a neighboring town, which makes it impossible to witness the entire night performance and make the proper train connections for home, just remember the DAILY MATINE.

William Davis and Thomas Bulfinch by order of the Lieutenant Governor and Council, at the expense of the Government. He was also presented with a sword and belt at the expense of the Colony, for his distinguished service, at the cost of £11, 188. 6d.

Of the wounded at Lovewell's Fight from Woburn, all became pensioners to more or less extent on the Colony bounty. Timothy Richardson was disabled, and mortgaged his lands for his support, and his widow asked for aid from the General Court and received eight pounds, one shilling. The Province made an allowance to Noah Johnson for wounds and losses; he was wounded in both hands, and in his right arm below the elbow. Josiah Johnson became a permanent pensioner of the Province, and was wounded in his right arm, which gave him much trouble.

In these present articles no attempt is made to convey only, an idea of the hardships and sufferings and sickness, captivity, running the gantlet, etc., and other tortures imposed by the In-

The Curious Way They Serve Bread at Meals in Yucatan.

At school, if we remember aright, rays the author of "The American Egypt," the bread throwing was an offense punishable with the sixth book of the Aenid to write out and the loss of a half holiday as the minimum penalty. In Yucatan it is all the fashi n in the highest circles.

No sooner hal we taken our places

No sooner had we taken our places it the table than an Indian maid brought in, holding them in her brown hands, a towering pile of soft white doughy tortilles, each about as big as a large biscait. These she placed at the side of our hostess, who at once began to throw them to us all.

It was so advoitly done that before you had recovered from the amazement with which the mere act filled you, you found yourself admiring the exquisite dexterity of the gentle thrower.

A tortilla whizzed circling across the thrower.

A tortilla whizzed circling across the table under your very nose and landed with delicate softness like a tired dove at the side of your host's plate!
Whiz, whir, here comes another! Why, t's like boomerang throwing, for this ast, you'll declare, circled round you before it sank nestling under the edge of the plate of steaming pork stew in front of you. The air is thick with these doughy missiles.

RIDING THE BUZZARD.

The Ricebird Uses His Bulky Enemy

as an Aeroplane.

People generally associate size an brute strength with victory, especially among the lower animals. Many times however, this is far from being the case, especially in the bird kingdom Among the rice flats of the Carolina there abound at some seasons of the year thuy ricebirds, birds so small that it takes two dozen for a good meal though bones and all are eaten.

The great buzzard is found circling over the flats at all seasons. He dread the time for the ricebird to come, for he is then nearly pestered to death. I he is then nearly pestered to death is a common sight to see one of the little birds fly up to a buzzard a after dodging this way and that not the awkward bulk, finally alight a forward between the buzzard's will on the back. INDIAN DEATH CUSTOMS.

Graves of the Hopi and the Hogans the Navajos.

The Hopi Indian believes that t souls of all deceased adults go to t grave, places it in a sitting facing the Grand canyon, ere end of a string and leads the otiend in the direction of the Grand or yon. At the end of four days it believed the soul leaves the box climbs the pole and with the string guide it goes to its eternal home in t canyon.

The Navajos, on the contrary. The Navajos, on the contrary, are very superstitious about handling dead bodies. They believe that the evil spirit that kills the person hovers around the hogan, as they call their lodge, awaiting other victims, and a hogan in which a death occurs is never occupied again. Navajo hogans are always built with the entrance facing the east. When a death occurs in one of them an opening is invariably made in the north side. Therefore when our sees a hogan with the north side knocked out he may be certain some one has died in it.—Dillon Wallace in e has died in it.-Dillon Wallace i Mitterlaken, in the Swiss Alps, is a central point for tourists for making excursions either into the neighboring valleys or on to the mountains. The sown, which is simply a cluster of hotels with a casino, is built on a plain between two lakes, deriving its name from its location, each lake about ten or a dozen miles long and about a null wide. Pendleton was a young lawyer of moderate means who had but recenty been admitted to the bar.

Touring in Europe affords every facility for lovemaking, and Pendleton had availed himself of the opportunity to woo Miss Denton. He seemed about to secure the prize when a young Britisher, heir to an earldom, came upon the seene, and it became a tie between him and the American. Pendleton had the mortification and disappointment to see his suit held up by nothing more or less than a title. Worse than this, from the time Lord Boyingham entered the contest for Miss Denton's hand he treated the Miss Denton's hand he treated the ority which has made John Bull unpopular with all other races.

There are hotels at Scheidig, and it had been arranged that the ladies of the party should put up at one of them while the men made the attempt upon intending to go up, but one of them becoming fearful of his heart's action This left Boyingham and Pendleton the only ones to go except the guides. There were two guides, armed with axes and alpenstocks, one for each end of the little procession

When the party left their friends standing on the porch of the hotel both Boyingham and Pendleton looked back at Miss Denton, each for a good Boyingham was elated, Pendle ton depressed, for the smile she be stowed on the former had an evident stowed on the former had an evident meaning in it, while the one she gave Pendleton conveyed nothing more than good will. The men moved off, encouraged by a cheer from those who remained, and were soon lost by a turn in their path taking them around the side of the first mountain.

It was 10 o'clock when the climbers started, and the day was fine. Through a telescope on the porch they were watched, being occasionally seen like a dotted line far up on the mountain side.

and they were visible no longer.

It was nearly night when two of the party, Lord Boyingham and one of the guides, Hans Dyckman, returned, their blanched faces and agitation denoting there had been an accident. "Where are the others?" asked a clamor of voices in tones of dread. "Lost, I fear," said Boyingham.

At that moment Delia Denton Joined those about the returned climbers and, irearing Boyingham's words, staggered. "What has happened?" asked all at once.

"Tell them, Hans," said Boyingham. "The snow covered our way," said Hans, "and getting on was difficult. We were crossing a ridge. Brouwer

"That we don't know," replied the guide. "It was snowing, and we could not see a dozen yards. We concluded to return for ropes, go back and as soon as it is light tomorrow make an investigation. They have provisions and flasks of liquor, and if they are mot killed we may save them."

At this moment the landford took up the end of the rope that had been severed between Boyingham and Pendleton and scrutinized it. Presently he dropped it and went away.

"Why did you examine that rope?"

About midnight a party, provided with such paraphernalia as were neces-sary to their purpose, made ready to start in quest of the missing guide and Pendleton. Lord Boyingham declared Pendleton. Lord Boyingham declared that the had looked them; that he had looked down into a crevasse several hundred feet deep, into which he was sure they had failen. He declined to go back with the party, making an excuse that he had been so "cut up" by the accident and the loss of the two men that he hed been so "cut up" by the accident and the loss of the two men that he would be of no use in the party who could not assist it was deemed best for him to remain in the hotel.

the party descended to Scheidig.

Great was the rejoicing at the hotel when the two men who had been considered lost appeared walking with their rescuers down the mountain. When they came up to the porch it twas crowded with people cheering and waving to them. Then some one asked, "Where's Lord Boyingham?" An attendant replied: "His lordship went down to Interlaken an hour ago. He received a telegram calling him away."

The meeting between Pendleton and Della Denton was far different from their parting. The title that had tempted here had shriveled since it must be taken with a man who was at once taken with a man who was at once dishonorable and a coward. Not only that, but the accident had revealed to her her own heart. The belief that Pendleton had been killed gave her a shock that surprised her. One glance from Pendleton at the woman he loved told him that he had won. told him that he had won.

When something of the excitement had subsided the landlord asked Pendleton to come into a private room. The rope with which the climber had started the day before was still about his waist. The landlord took up the end and, looking at it, threw it from him.

"What is it?" asked Pendleton.

LIGHTNING VERSUS STEAM. Testing the Telegraph In the Early

Testing the Telegraph In the Early Days of its Invention.

Years ago, when the electric telegraph was a new idea and a mystery to the masses, there came trouble one Saturday night in the Bank of England. The business of the day had closed and the balance was not right.
There was a deficit of just fi00. It was not the money, but the error, that must be found. For the officers and the clerks there could be no sleep until the mystery had been cleared up. All that night and all Sunday a force of men were busy; money was surely gone from the vaults, but no one could discover whence.
On the following morning a clerk gone from the vaults, but no one could discover whence.

On the following morning a clerk suggested that the mistake might have occurred in packing for the West Indles some boxes of specie that had been sent to Southampton for shipment. His chief acted on the suggestion. Here was an opportunity to test the powers of the telegraph—lightning against steam, and steam with forty. against steam, and steam with forty eight hours the start. Very soon the eight hours the start. Very soon the telegraph asked a man in Southamp-ton, "Has the ship Mercator salled?" The answer came back, "Just weigh-ing anchor." "Stop her in the queen's name,"

"Stop her in the queen's name." flashed back the telegraph. "She is stopped," was returned.
"Have on deck certain boxes (marks given), weigh them carefully and let me know the result," telegraphed the chief.

LAYING BRICKS.

How Scientific Methods Raised the Standard of a Day's Work. There are now eminent consulting engineers who are engaged by indus-trial heads to study their establishcirclineers win are engaged by industrial heads to study their establishments from top to bottom with a view to finding by scientific study the methods of working, accounting and handling labor which will improve on the old traditional habits. Some extraordinary results have been attained. What scientific management means is admirably illustrated by the story of bricklaying, as told by an expert. Ordinarily a brick mason makes eighteen different sets of motions in laying a single brick. He bends over, in the first place, to pick up one brick, and in lifting it he lifts ten pounds of brick and about a hundred pounds of brick and about a numero possible brick mason—the upper part of his own body. In laying 1,000 bricks in a day's work he lifts 100,000 pounds of brick mason. This was an obvious waste of labor. So a common laborer was hired to put the bricks where the masons would not have to stoop for them. Another thing is that when a mason picks up a handmade brick, which is always a little thicker at one is side than on the other, he tosses the brick up, turning it over until his brick up, turning it over until his bricks up, turning it over until his brick up, turning it over until his brick spiled top up before they were brought to the masons. Then, further, every one has seen the mason tap his of brick several times to settle it into the mason the was to make the mortar thinner, so that the weight to fit brick would settle it into the right position. This was so make the mortar thinner, so that the weight to fit brick would settle it into the right mason. A physician was knocked down and robbed while on his way to see a patient. His pockets were rifled, and one of the articles stolen was a clinical thermometer with which he had earlier in the evening taken the temperature of a patient. He remembered the temperature registered and also that he had not shaken down the mercury before putting the thermometer in his pocket. He communicated these facts to the police. Some time afterward a thermometer registering the identical temperature was discovered in a pawnshop, and the police were enabled thereby to track the doctor's assailants and to arrest them.

A certain eniment English lady, the proud possessor of nitle of fairly high degree, who admired Whistler's gen ins to the extent of purchasing one of his pictures, ever was able to obtain possession of her property. One day she drove to the studio in her victoria.

Mr. Whistler went to greet her.

"But the impudence of these people," he continued, "who think that because they pay a few paltry hundred pounds they own my pictures. Why, it merely secures them the privilege of having them in their houses now and then! The pictures are mine!" answered and said, "It is well spoken," or, as in the margin, "the word is good." Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity, and, having prepared their sacrifice, we see them from morning until noon and from noon until the time of the evening sacrifice calling upon their gods, Elijah lurging them on with his "Cry aloud, for he is a god. Either he is talking or he hath a pursuit, or he is in a sjourney, or paradventure he sleepeth and must be awaked." With what interest or perhaps in sullen silence they must have watched the repairing of the altar of the Lord, the placing of twelve stones to represent the twelve tribes, the digging of a trench and then the placing of the sacrifice on the wood! If they had been at all indifferent up to this time they would surely be amazed at the threefold drenching of everything with twelve barrels of water until even the trench was filled. The lesson, I kings xviii, 25-39—Memory Verses, 38, 39—Golden Text, Josh. xxiv, 15—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After Elljah's long sojourn at Cherith and Zarephath the word of the Lord came again to him. Compare verse 1 and chapter xvii, 2, 8. The majority of believers are appointed to glorify God in a very quiet, commonplace kind of life, not often so lowly as Zarephath and yet very ordinary. May the thirty years of Jesus at Nazareth be a great encouragement to all such.

A Bullet Stopped the Game.

Alfred de Musset, the poet and dramatist, was almost as fond of chess as of poetry. He played nearly every night at the Cafe de la Regence, and even the revolution of February, 1848, did not divert him from his habit. He turned up as usual and, finding no one there to play with, insisted that the waiter should make a game for him. The waiter did so, though a fusiliade was raging in the street outside, and all went well until a musket bullet smashed a mirror in immediate proximity to the board. immediate proximity to the board. Musset was anxious to continue in spite of the interruption, but his opponent would not. "With monsieur's permission," he said, "we will adjourn the game until after the republic has been proclaimed."—Paris Gaulois.

Sydney Smith's Criticism.

The story is told in Mr. Barry O'Brien's book on John Bright how on one occasion Sydney Smith, while looking critically at the unfinished portrait of a celebrated nonconformist divine, and to the artist, "Do you not think seriould throw into the face a stronger expression of hostility to the established church?"

I taught y Julian Latin and at the same time deft ly wove in that other instruction which was far nearer my heart. I prepared him to enter college and to be my future husband at the same time. In learning the first he was not as stupid as my father considered him; as to the other I confess I had a very hard time with him. He would conjugate the verb "to love," saying "I love" with no feeling whatever. One day while he was doing so in this perfunctory way I sat very near him—so near, indeed, that a few loose strands of my hair brushed against his cheek. Suddeelly there came a fervor into his voice that I had vainly expected for weeks. Then I felt an arm stealing around my waist, and I knew that my pupil was prepared both for college and to be my lover.

He passed his entrance examination without a condition and gave me all

The natural he studied in his fibrary from the ancients; the artificial came to him the moment he left it. His daughter must go to college, and that meant absence of love for seven or eight years to come. That he had right under his own nose but a repetition of what had occurred ever since human beings were born into the world was furthest from his thoughts.

In nature the first step in mating is to build a nest. In my case there was a lot of preliminary work to do. My first great object to accomplish was to induce my mother to procure some dresses that would reach at least to my ankles. After much trouble I per standed her to engage a dressmaker to come to the house and make me some summer costumes. By day mother would give her instructions as to the length of my skirts and by night I would surreptitiously lower them while they were merely basted. When the termed "The Dead Ship of Salem." Father was not looking at me, so I was at liberty to ralse my eyes to heaven with a mute thanks and resolved that if the coaching should continue for another year in case the instructor could not teach the pupil how to conjugate the verb "to love" I would do so myself.

For a year Julian Trowbridge came and went for his lessons, taking no notice of me whatever. The next spring I asked father if he thought his pupil would be able to enter college that see "Possibly," he replied, "by hard "Possibly," he replied, "by hard "aste for the "so year incoming vessels reported in the year incoming vessels reported in the year and sails and shining hull and spars."

"Oh, my goodness gracious!" I said to myself, putting my hand to my heart to still its wild beating. Then I asked, "Is he coming here for instruction?"

"Yes, every morning at 11."

And so I should see this young god whom I had suddenly set up in my heart every day till June. B F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The event of the season at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Boston is due the week of February 20th, when Gertrude Hoffman and her company of forty will be the feature in Gertrude Hoffman's New Revue. This is un-questionably one of the most elaborate productions ever offered in vaudeville. or anywhere else, and the work done by Miss Hoffman herself seems almost incredible. During the action of the piece she impersonates something like a dozen different characters.

One of the brightest spokes in the Eastern wheel this year will be John G. Jermon's new company. "The Columbia Burlesquers" who will be the attraction at the Gaiety Theatre week beginning Feb. 20. direct from its long engagement at the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, and the company which appears in this city is the same one that has made "Beverly" so popular and so well patronized. In every city in which they have appeared they have been greeted with large and enthusiastic audiences, and after the first performance "Standing Room Only" has been the sign that has greeted late comers to the Theatre. The play has a wonderful appealing ower, and is enthusiastically received y all classes of theatre patrons.

HOLLIS STREET.

Local theatre-goers have a treat in store for next Monday night in the production at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, of Porter Emerson Browne's latest drama, "The Spendthrift" which had a long run at the Hudson Theatre in New York and this winter broke all records at the Chicago Opera House.
"The Spendthrift" was produced in New York last March and remained at the Hudson Theatre all summer, being the only drama able to surviv the hot nights on Manhatten Island Since then it has returned to New York four separate times to fill engage nents at other theatres that were ments at other theatres that were demanded by its popularity. While this play has been a long time coming to Boston it will be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre exactly in every detail as it was produced in New York. 5), and the man of God caring only for the glory of the living and true God, whom he represented! Since the Lord the glory of the living and true God, whom he represented? Since the Lord said to Elijah when He sent him to meet Ahab, "I will send rain upon the earth" (xviil, I), why should Elijah need to pray so earnestly for it? This is perplexing to many, but it is His way. Concerning His great promises to Israel in the future He says, "I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them" (Ezek, xxxvi, 37).

The question should search us, Have we anything of the zeal for God and persevering prayer that Elijah had? When Ahab reached home and told Jezabel all that Elijah had done she was angry indeed and sent a messenger to him with a threat that she would have his life within twenty-four hours. Now comes the strange part of the story in the seemingly sad fact that the man of God who feared said it was owing to the bad conduct of the superintending clergyman and catechist.

He and others had witnessed them drinking when driving round on their visits. They had passed a black bottle from hand to hand. It was impossible to attend the ministry of such men. Inquiries proved that the offending "bottle" was a pair of field-glasses with which the drivers surveyed the surrounding country and tried to locate the various churches, shacks and tralls.—Sunday at Home.

He was a man of mighty deeds and evidently thought that only in some mighty way could Israel be cleansed from her idolatry. God has a way so different from our way offtimes (Isa, Iv, S, 9), and it becomes us to hear and heed His voice. "I will work, and who shall hinder it?" (Isa, Illi, 13.) How suggestive and searching his commission now as well as the twice repeated "What Acade to the sky." "Whenever I hear the suffrage combated," said an English lord, "on the score of woman's protected, sheltered, petted life I think of a poor woman i once questioned in England.

The GLOBE.

There has been no more popular dramatic novel in a real decade than George Barr McCutcheon's "Heverly," which is generally conceded to be for the strongest, most virile and entertaining of this prolific author's works. The story has been dramatized by Robert M. Baker, and if the extraordinary success the play has met with in Buffalo, Toronto, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Pittsburg and Chicago, where it drew the capacity of the theaire at every performance, is any criterion to judge by, "Beverly" is even more popular as a play than the first tanded in Australata the only offer footed animal in the country was a rat. GRAFT IN PERSIA. BATHTUBS IN MEXICO.

Officials Pay For the Privilege of Fleecing the Public.

A LAND WITHOUT LAWYERS.

And Yet That Extraordinary Exemption Does Not Help the Unfortunate Who Gets into Trouble—Ccaxing the Accused to Confess.

It would be difficult for a Persian who has not traveled to understand American excitement over what the hewspapers here call "graft." Mymotherland, Persia, is not yet quite awake to the possibility of a man's serving the public for a certain fixed salary and taking nothing more. In Persia they take it for granted that every officeholder will "gouge" people whenever he gets a chance.

There are no lawyers in Persia, so there are no lokes about lawyers' appetite for geld and silver. If you have ever had a costly lawsuit on your hands you may think that makes matters simpler, but getting into trouble means being squeezed for money wring for money as if you were.

hands you may think that makes had-ters simpler, but getting into trouble means being squeezed for money, wrung for money, as if you were a piece of wet cloth in a washerwoman's of your orin.

pilece of wet cloth in a washerwoman's strong grip.

This is how it is managed: First, you see, the governor of a city or of a province never has a definite salary from the state—not at all. On the contary, he pays the state treasury several thousand dollars more or less for the privilege of being governor and of making what he can out of the enterprise. He is not an elected officer; he is more like a "concessionaire" at one is more like a "concessionaire" at one of your big expositions, who offers a large sum for a chance to run a res-taurant or to provide ice cream soda or taurant or to provide ice cream soda or candy.

The governor (or mayor) of a large Persian town may have perhaps 100 to 150 employees under him. Of these only a few house servants (cook, coachman and the like) have fixed wages. The incomes of the others depend upon the amount of money which they can help turn into the great man's hands in the form of fines and taxes. You can guess whether the nelphbors are fond of them!

Suppose now you live in Persia, You have leased a piece of ground or you have sold some goods and the other man does not pay. You dun him, Then you threaten him. Then you go to the governor and make a complaint. An officer arrests your debtor and takes him before the governor's secretary for examination. Possibly he can convince that lift is not a just debt. If he cannot do that he would better put all his wits to work to convince the secretary that poverty makes it quite impossible to pay up.

This is where many of the 150 under le to pay up. This is where many of the 150 under employees get their chance. A large part of their occupation is hunting up facts about everybody's property, everybody's business, everybody's income. They know an amazing num ber of things which your debtor sup posed were safely secret. They pro-luce information whenever information is wanted.

Your man's pretense that business i brushed aside, and he is made to pro duce an amount of money considerably larger than the original debt.

brushed aside, and he is made to produce an amount of money considerably larger than the original debt. "Made" to produce it? Yes. There are shocking things that can be done to him if he hesitates too long, and he knows it. So, like a child aware that there is an ugly stick waiting in the corner, he usually does not hesitate too long. He saves his skin and hands over the money. You get maybe 80 to 90 per cent to satisfy your claimthat is, the officer of justice practically collects from you something for his own services. The rest goes to the governor and such of the employees as may be considered in the case.

Perhaps you have a shop in the town bazaar or market place and some poor good-for-nothing steals a chicken that was hanging on the wall. If a woman was the thief she is most likely finedpossibly whipped if she has no money to pay a fine. If the culprit is a man they punch a hole through the cartlage of the lower end of his nose, put a cord through the hole and lead him in this painful disgrace all around the bazaar. The efficer collects as he goes along a few cents from that one as an acknowledgment of the officer's service in publicly exposing a thief.

Naturally it often happens that some body is brutally murdered, and the guilty one is unknown. Then the governor's detective agents set to work. Anybody may be arrested on suspicion and examined either as the probable offender or as a witness. If the suspect has plenty of money he can always prove his innocence or his ignorance by paying cash to the examining officers, though, since there is no regulated tariff in such matters, the prolable offender or have the surface of thousands of the inhabitants and bore away plunder to the value of nearly altonous nodes the himstate that the total the first call of the wall of the out and the great Kohinoor that it is too the first and the great Kohinoor that the first call mand. The British first came into control in 18 officers, though, since there is no regu lated tariff in such matters, the proceeding may be quite expensive. If the suspect is too poor to make things right with the examiners or too stubborn to tell what he knows—and sometimes, I am afraid, if he really does not know anything to tell—they have some "third degree" methods warranted to make a man say some thing. One such method is what they fall the "bastinado." It is whipping the soles of the bare feet with slen der rods. Often live coals from a pipe are put on the shaven head of a prisoner to make him confess. Sometimes—But no. Probably you would not care to hear any more along this par iteular line. Persian inventions in this stubborn to tell what he knows-ar care to hear any more along this particular line. Persian inventions in this department of criminology are clever in their way, but not things to describe in full detail.—Leon Medem in the control of t

He Had a Claim.

In a certain town was a young lawyer whose father was very rich and who had been sent to an eastern law school. Since his graduation he had done nothing except open an office because he had plenty of money. This young lawyer was proposed for membership in the local fire company.

"We cannot elect him," one of the members protested. "The constitution of our company says that the members of it must sleep and live here in the city, and he lives out of town on a farm and not in the city at all. He would be of no value at all in case of a fire at night."

"No" repulsed his represent "it to true."

A sportsman of great imaginative sifts and fond of telling his exploits related that at one shot he had done nothing except open an office because he had plenty of money. His explanation was that, although he had only hit one partridge, the bird in failing had clutched at another partridge and brought that to earth entangled in its claws.

"But how about the hare?" he was asked.

TIGERISH TUNAS.

Wild Carnage When They Meet Their Natural Prey, Flying Fish.

One time at St. Clements we sighted a feeding school of tuna, an exhigirating sight. 'A flying fish weighing a pound and a half or more would start from the water and soar an extraordinary distance, nearly out of sight, but every inch of that flight I knew was covered by a big tuna keeping his place just beneath the "filer" and ready to selze it the moment it fell into the water. This rarely failed. The moment the fish began to drop the tuna would spring at it like a tiger, turning and tossing the spume into the air with a splendid and electrifying rush, a maneuver that was repeated all over the blue channel.

The sensational charge meant that a school of tunas had discovered a school of its natural prey, flying fishes. At once the lust for blood and food was on, and the carnage was the result. I have observed some curious scenes at sea, but never have I seen fear so forcibly expressed as by a school of flying fishes exhausted and at the mercy of the voracious tunns. I have had them gather about my boat and cling to its keel as closely as they could, while the air was full of leaping tunas and soaring flying fish. At such times when a school of sardines its rounded up the fishes are so terrified that men have rowed up to them and scooped them in by the pailful.—C. F

An Old Christmas Law.

The general court of Massachusetts Bay Colony, following the example of the English parliament, in 1659 enacted a law that "anybody who is found observing, by abstinence from labor, days as Christmas day shall pay for every such offense 5 shillings." This law was repealed in 1681.

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK will open on February 1, 1911, a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OF DEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

"Really, I couldn't say, Mr. Ord." began Smithers, and then, as if the real meaning of his employer's insination had pierced some sensitive spot, at last he added forcibly, "But I wouldn't do such a thing, you know, Mr. Ord, beging your pardon."

"You wouldn't, eh? How do you know you wouldn't, eh? How do you know you wouldn't?"

"I couldn't sir," protested Smithers warmly. "You see the plaster I'm wearing is a bunion plaster, and I couldn't get the securities"—

Mr. Ord raised a fat forcinger. "I didn't ask you for details regarding your personal allments Mr. Sasithers"

GETTING EXACT TIME.

We said iclify. There was silence for a few moments while his little eyes roamed from his three foot shelf of wisdom to Smithers' now agitated countenance. He pulled the ticker tape toward him and studied the figures as they slipped through his fingers. He had made rather a fool of himself and the L. D. bonds were as far from discovery as ever. Once more he turned to his clerk.

"Did you mention to anybody that those bonds were in the vault?"
"Not a soul knew of their presence there except yourself and me, sir."
"Did you check over all the other securities in my box?"
"Yes, sir, and every other security in the vault," returned Smithers earnestly. "Begging your pardon, Mr. Ord, you might recollect that in every other instance of loss of papers, they were atterward found to have been mislaid elither by Mr. Carson or yourself."
"Brough!" said Ord sternly. "I have no such recollection, young man! Now," pointing an accusing finger in the face of his uncomfortable clerk, he continued with measured accents, "hose bonds bore a date stamp impressed with purple ink. How did purple ink come to be on your hands and face, Mr. Smithers?" Mr. Ord shot a glance at his bookshelf and then his eyes came back to the face of his clerk.

For the first time Smithers' face winkled into a faint smile. "I was assisting Miss Fenn to adjust a new ribbon in her type machine," he said the primly. "Before I had time to remove these stains you called me."
"Is it one of the duties of my chief clerk to assist the stenographers with such duties?" thundered Mr. Ord fierce.

In Jezebel we see those who, like Herodias, do not scruple to take off the earth any one who happens to be in their way, true children of the devil, who has the power of death and was a murderer from the beginning (Heb. ii. 14; John vili, 44). "I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite" (verse 7) were her words to Ahab, as if she owned it and Naboth, too, and could do as she pleased. Her true lord and master, the devil, once said to the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, "All these things will I give thee if thou wiit fall down and worship me" (Matt. iv, 8, 9). Because He would not worship him he proceeded to kill Him, which he finally did.

So Jezebel proceeded forthwith to kill Naboth, which she did by means of two sons of Bellal, who lied, like their father, and others who did her bidding, afraid not to, I suppose, lest they, too, might lose their lives at the hands of

The Spectacled Bear.

The spectacled bear of Ecuador is so called because of a patch of white around each eye, which makes the animal look as though he was peering through a pair of great spectacles.

In size and general color the spectacled bear looks not unlike the American black bear. But its hair is very shaggy. At each side of the bend is a speciation of the living and true God with one who represented the devil, and yet when Jesus Christ was on appearance of wearing a halter. But the most distinctive feature is the white around the eyes.

Von Hilderschoff departed, and Man teufel called upon the baroness. Indeed, he made several calls, and to give an excuse for doing so he told her that her husband, fearing she would be lonely during his absence, had asked him to drop in once in awhile to cheer her up.

had not been heeded.

It so happened that Von Gethart met his old flame at a social function the very evening after Manteufel had "let the cat out of the bag." She was very gracious to him and danced with him. Manteurel saw them together and as soon as the dance was over joined them. Louise straightway dismissed Gethart and walked away on the arm of Manteurel.

Manteurel treated her during the rest of the evening as he would have treated a schoolgirl who had been placed under his orders and had been disobedient. She seemed to be very penitent and promised not to do so any more. Not only this—the next day she wrote a note to her protector express-kind acts of his friend Manteufel. She also wrote that she had met Gethart at a social function and that he had called upon her. This, she said, had seemed to excite the disapprobation of Manteufel. She did not like to repulse Gethart, fearing to make trouble. She longed for the day when her husband would return and relieve her of an emuld return and relieve her of an em-

Mesned who had founded a college with weaking spacetian and relieve her of an embarrassing position. To this the baron replied that he would be at home on a certain date, arriving on a midnight train.

The evening of Von Hilderschoff's expected arrival the baroness wrote a note to her protector and one to the man from whom she was being protected, asking them to call upon her. They met. The scowl that lowered upon Manteufel's brow was like a thunderstorm in the Alps. Believing that he acted in the interest of his directions and bury gold coins and pewelry. This be did for several days, and, being searched before he left, he saw no chance of bettering his condition. "However, one day he saw a cat which he killed and ripped open. It squite true he did not know the value of money. It is quite true he did not know the value of money for himself, but he knew its value to others. He walked right into a trap and before he had been in Von Gethart's presence with the man his friend disliked, he had been in Von Gethart's presence half an hour had in the most gentlemanly manner in the world insulted him. It happened in this wise:

"I do not think," said the baroness, "that your men in Germany have the respect, the reverence, for women our men in America have."

"You are right, baroniess," said Manteufel's looking fercely at Gethart. "We have here in Berlin men who would not hesitate to take advantage of a woman left unprotected by her vanced.

"Gentlemen," cried the baron, "will you kindly inform me as to the cause of this quarrel?"

Both men, astonished, stood mute.
"I have been informed by the baroness," continued Von Hilderschoff, "that there has been trouble between you two. If my wife has anything to do with it I beg you to put up your swords. Neltner of you need be concerned about her. I alone assume to defend her."

Both the men addressed looked as if they wished the earth would open and Lianfairpwligwyngylloggerychwyrn-drobwilliandysillogogogoch is a charming little village in Anglesey, Wales, and a favorite visiting place for tourists. There are many other charming little villages in Wales—all over the world, in fact, but none with a name like that. Lianfairpw., etc., means "the Church of St. Mary in a hollow of white bazel near to the rapid whirlpool and to the Church of St. Tysillo by the red cave."

Both the men addressed looked as if they wished the earth would open and swallow them, but it was Manteufel who seemed especially crushed. He had gone on the field-believing that he was protecting his friend's wife but cherished a hope that knowledge of the quarrel might never reach his friend.

"Gentlemen," said the baroness with a certain sweetness that never deserted her, "we should be pleased to see you both at dinner this evening."

Manteufel teated her during the rest of the evening as he would have treated a schoolgirl who had been placed under his orders and had been disobelient. She seemed to be very penitent and promised not to do so any more. Not only this—the next day she wrote a note to her protector expressing more penitence.

That the baroness' penitence was only skin deep was evident from the fact that she saw as much of Von Gethart as of Manteufel. The latter, still insensible to the fact that his interest in his charge was rather for himself than her busband, protested to the baroness against her accepting at tentions from a man her husband disliked and distrusted. The baroness claimed that she could not declaine them without giving offense. From this moment the bitter feelings that had entered the breast of Manteurfel. She man instead of the woman.

Meanwhile the baroness was writing loving letters to her husband, in which she never failed to mention the many kind acts of his friend Manteurfel. She also wrote that she had met Gethart at a social function and that he had called upon her. This, she said, had seemed to excite the disapprobation of Manteurfel. The Towarda Club's All-Stars Company of actors and singers gave "The Incognitos," a musical comedy, in Lycum Hall last Monday evening to a crowded house. It was the chief feature of the Club's 10th public exhibition, and was, so the critics said, far and away the best they have ever regaled the peopel with, and that is saying a great deal.

The original plan of the JOURNAL reporter was to select a few of those who he supposed to be the smartest young men composing the caste—say, for instance, the semiproflessionals, Sam Mendum, Dan Norris, Fred Leathe, Guy Marion, Will Chute, Ben Nichola, Jr., et als, for special comment, but when he came to go over the ment, but when he came to go over the long list of brilliant performers he found everyone of them a Star actor of the first magnitude, and of course com-parisons were not in order, so, the method he at first laid out was aban-

Verrio's Reward For Decorating Two English Royal Palaces.

Rubens received for his painting of the grand ceiling at the banqueting house. Whitehall, the sum of £4,000. The space covered by this painting is about 400 yards, so that he was paid nearly £10 a yard. In addition to this remuneration, he was knighted, and a chain of gold was also presented to him by Charles I.

Sir James Thornhill, the first Englishman who received knighthood for his ability in art, was paid only £3 a yard for the laborious work on the ceiling of Greenwich hospital and only £1 a yard for painting the ornaments on the walls. "The Duke of Montague." says Sir James Thornhill in his memorial to the commissioners for building the hospital, "paid M. Rossof for his saloon £2,000 and kept an extraordinary table for him, his friends and servants for two years while the work was being done at an expense estimated at £500 per annum."

MONSTER WHALES.

One That Swallowed Whole a Shark Fifteen Feet Long.

Frank T. Bullen, the noted writer of sea tales, in one of his lectures said that in New Zealand he once saw a whale opened and there were found in its stomach a number of fish which must simply have swum down its throat, and among them was a shark fifteen feet long and nine feet round. The huge Greenland whale was described. Mr. Bullen asked his audience to imagine a monster of 250 tons and told how such a one was taken on a voyage in which he took part, enough whalebone being taken out of his head to pay a good dividend on the voyage. For six months in the year this particular kind of whale, which was the most helpless of all, led a life of alarums and excursions, for he was always being chased.

A third kind of whale, the humpbacked whale, was shown in a picture jumping from the water, and Mr. Bullen explained that this was no indication of joy in life. They were, in fact, if not driven out of their minds, certainly driven out of the water by parasites adhering to their bodies.

MONSTER WHALES.

fact, if not driven out of their minds, certainly driven out of the water by parasites adhering to their bodies. This particular whale was greatly devoted to its young, and if a man happened to kill a calf be needed all his ingenuity to escape from the mother. On one occasion fifty-two boats went after whales in the bay of California and by accident a calf was killed. In one bour the parent destroyed fifty of the fifty-two boats, killing a number of men, and then salled out to sea without a scratch.

BEN BUTLER'S BLUFF.

General John A. Bingham was a member of the military tribunal that tried Mrs. Surratt and the Lincoln asans. Surface and the Lincoln as assination conspirators.

After the trim in the subsequent debates in the house General B. F. Butler frequently charged that the commission had arrived at an unjust verdict and had convicted an innocent woman. In a memorable debate he boldly proclaimed that if the contents of a dlary which had been found on the dead body of J. Wilkes Booth were ever made public it would disclose the fact that it contained the proof of Mrs. Surratt's innocence, which proof had been infamously suppressed by the commission. When General Bingham made a movement as though he would repel such an accusation. Butler dramatically drew a memorandum book from his breast pocket and held it aloft, but did not utter a word. Bingham naturally supposed that Butler had a copy of a diary such as he had spoken of. As a matter of fact the book contained nothing but blank leaves. General Butler was just bluffing. ever made public it would disclose the Presently Biederbick began to argue that the fact that no ship was to be seen from the point above them did not necessarily indicate that they had been deceived in believing that the sounds they heard were those of a ship's whistle. He suggested that the ship might be in Payer harbor, which could not be seen from their ridge.

Greely aroused himself sufficiently to say that he did not consider this probable. Biederbick, however, went on arguing in his persistent German on arguing in his persistent German way that help was near. At length Greely, whose nerves were a wreck and whose mind was fast giving way.

WOBURN NATIONAL BANK

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES

GOVERNMENT. To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK will open on February 1, 1911, a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OF DEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

he went on to his home, where Mary clearly the most of the first was waiting anxiously for his return.

When he reached the road that turned down to the mill he hesitated and then walked slowly on, head down, moodily thinking. At last he came to the railroad station, where a few goungers awaited the passing of the noon train. Ben looked down the shining length of track that led to the city beyond. There might be opportunities for other work than that he had left behind when he married Mary Etta five years ago. He had hated the hearrying of the dinner pail. They chafed his Madison pride. Ben was the last of his family, and all the pride of the Madisons seemed concentrated in this young man with the strong, lorad shoulders and the bitterly drooping mouth, who imagined he had made a followed life. Mary Etta had not had to do as much drudgery as many of his neighbors' wives. She had help in her house-cleaning, and whenever there was extra work to be done she had a woman to do her washing and ironing and scrubbing. And yet Mary Etta looked very tired this fall. Indeed, there was a faded look about her usually blooming face that Ben did not understand and secretly worried about. And yet his anxiety was not so great as his pride. Mary Etta was a wonderful manager he thought as he left the eating place and walked almiessly down the street. She had planned and contrived all through the autumn months while the dread of going back to the bench still hung like a dark cloud over him.

He paused in front of a gaudily painted doorway and read the posters of a moving picture show. In a few moments he had yielded to the temptation to enter and found himself seated well down in front in the long, narrow theater. At the moment there were being produced the pictures of a thrilling rescue from fames as a tall tenement house burned.

Ben watched breathlessly and cheered as heartily as the rest when the

Now we came in our lesson of to-day to something wholly unique in the Bible story, for, although Enoch also was translated, we have no record of the incidents connected therewith. Only these two have ever left the earth without dying, but a great company will have this privilege when Jesus shall come to the air for His church (I Cor. xv, 51, 52; I Thess. iv, 16-18). The four places mentioned are easily suggestive of different stages of Christian experience, Gligal reminding us of the reproach of Egypt rolled away, the past under the blood Josh v, 9, 105. Bethel tells of visions of God, ministering angels, etc.; Jericho was where the new captain appeared to Joshua, and the thirteenth round of the city brought down the walls.

KNEW TOO MUCH.

Tennyson's Father Had to Fly For His Life From Russia.

Shortly after the assassination of Emperor Paul of Russia, Tennyson, the father of the poet, dined with Lord St. Helens, the British ambassa of on, in Moscow. Several Russian officers of high rank whose names be did not know were also guests. During diner a guarded reference was made to the emperor's death.

"Why do you speak so gingerly about a matter so notorlous?" cried Tennyson impulsively, leaning across his neighbor, a Russian whose breast was covered with orders. "We know trey well in England that the Emperor Paul was murdered. Count Zoboff knocked him down and Benningsen, and Count Pahlen strangled him."

There was a strained silence; then the mabassador abruptly changed the subject. As the guests filed out into an adjoining room Lord St. Heiens derew Tennyson aside. "Don't go into the next room," he whispered, 'but fly the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, seeing no one but Jesus only with our leave the wilspered, 'but fly the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, seeing no one but Jesus only with our leave the wilspered, 'but fly seed no fire without dying.

There is a fearful record in Rev. xix, 20, of two men who shall be cast into the lake of fire without dying.

All this indicates progress in the divine life, but there is always more for us to enjoy, and we will increasingly possess our possessions if we whole heartedly follow on (Obad. xvii; Hos. vi, 3).

To Elijah's question, "Ask what I shall do for thee," Elisha promptly replied, "Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me" (verse 9). When Elijah considered what he had passed through we do not wonder that he said to the man who wanted a double portion of his spirit. dered want Joel meant when he said such and such a thing."

"Most times I reckon he didn't mean nothing at all," said Mrs. Spinning cheerfully. "I take it Joel was shy. But, land, why are we all talking about him as if he was dead and waiting to be buried? If Joel Tykesbury don't like the way he's been treated here he's not going to stay in Little River for nobody. I'm sorry he's going, for I do like him. Once he shut up his shop and came over and helped Henry get in his hay when it was threatening a storm, and another time when Liny had the measles he went clean over to the Ford after Dr. Mitchell and didn't want to hear a word of thanks either."

"And giving away his furniturean't that the queerest thing? I s'pose likely he's going to board when he gets to the city," murmured Annie Baker.

"Maybe he is going to get married. Now I come to think of it I shouldn't wonder a mite if that was the secret of his going. He's going to get married to a widder, maybe, and she, having a houseful of turniture left by her first husband, won't have no need for Joel's things." Mrs. Spinning beamed around the busy circle. "I'm mighty glad to think he's going to get married. He's just the nicest kind of man. He'll make some girl a good husband. I'm disappointed, though. I kinder hoped he'd pick a wife from Little River."

There was a long silence after this broken only by requests for the "sixty white thread" or the "forty black," until at last Mrs. Willowell, at whose house they had met, announced that refreshments would be served in tending room, and so for the time being Joel Tykesbury and his affairs were fornotten.

Joel himself, having given away his furniture and disposed of his business, sat in his lonely room in the best hote the village afforded and wondered what he would do next.

"Til shake the dust of this here village from my feef," sald Joel morosely, and smalled mitrhfully. "I didn't know and shall as going to per married, thought the proposely, and the saffairs were fornotten.

"Til shake the dust of this here village from my feet," said Joel morosely, eying his reflection in the wavy mirror with a gloomy frown. "There won't be one person that will miss me when I'm gone. If I'd been treated decent here I'd never thought of leaving Little River. It would have done the village good to spend my money here. I could build a house as fine as Lawyer Beggs and live on my interest money. The women aln't never noticed me much, and I ain't a bad looking feller." Joel reddened as he lifted shy eyes at his reflection in the mirror. Good looking in spite of the mirror. He was the second as the lifted shy eyes at his reflection in the mirror. Good looking in spite of the mirror. Good looking in spite of the mirror. Good looking in spite of the mirror. Good looking in so the looking feller." Suddenly he arose and, approaching the glass, brushed his hair into some semblance of order. "I'll go to New York tomorrow night, and now, after I've had my supper, I'll say goodby to some of the folks that I've had acquaintance with."

Joel's scowl was quite black when he rang the doorbell at Spinning's; therefore when the portal swung wide and the hall shed a stream of light over his form he blinked and winced like an owl.

An hour before the time for the curtain to rise he chose to lock himself in a closet at his hotel and refused every persuasion his son could offer to keep his engagement.

persuasion his son could offer to keep his engagement.

In despair Edwin rushed to the theater to explain his father's absence. The house was already filled. The manager was distracted and in his excited questioning of the boy accidentally learned that the tragedian had flippantly told Edwin to go and act Richard himself. "We'll take him at his word." said the manager. And the frightened boy was hastened to the stage and helped into his father's Gloster costume, several sizes too big for him. Members of the company gave helpful encouragement.

When Joel Tykesbury opened the letter and read that his step-uncle on his mother's side had died without near relatives and had left him the comfortable sum of $15,000 in cash there was not a soul to whom he confided the astounding news. Close locked behind his compressed lips was hidden a secret that would have provided the people of Little River with a measureless source of interest for the coming winter months.

The play opened without an explanation to the audience. When Edwin made his entrance for the opening solltong the said, "When you going to leave little River, Joel?"

"Tomorrow night," said Joel, helping himself to another biscuit.

"Wish you was going to stay," said the same play, in which role he made his very first appearance. The audience was kindly tolerant for a time, then interested and finally enthus forgetting his diffidence in his aston ishment. "Who'll miss me?"

He Ate the Hay.

There are still some mighty eaters left. Not long ago a Berlin market porter undertook for a wager to put away at one sitting six mutton chops, twelve eggs, a goose, a duck, six pounds of potatoes and twenty-two pounds of hay. Difficulties were anticipated with the last course, and large sums were laid against the accomplishment of the feat. The ingenious porter solved the difficulty by calling for a cigarette after he had finished the duck. He then set light to the hay, pounded the ashes up with the potatoes and swallowed the lot. After a hented discussion the referee declared him the winner.—London Giobe.

of Deaths It Causes.

Why are so many people, brave under all other circumstances, so deathly afraid of thunder and lightning?

It is not because lightning is o dangerous, for it isn't half so dangerous as going out of the house on an ley morning, walking down the cellar stairs or a hundred other things we stairs or a hundred other things we do every day without a thought of personal harm. More people are killed each year by falling building material, more die from fright, than are killed by lightning. The census bureau shows only 169 people killed by lightning in this entire country during a given year, and only thirty of these people were killed in the cities. Heat and the sun killed 763 during the same year, 203 died from cold and freezing and 4,395 were drowned.

But you will find it quite a waste of time during a thunderstorm to try to ease the fears of a person who is afraid by telling him or her that the chances of being killed by lightning are less than two in a million; they will remain just as frightened for all this mortuary knowledge. And after the storm has passed and onerves are steadled the woman who was so frightened a few minutes before will start getting supper on the gas stove, as smiling through her tears that the danger has all passed and only laugh ing if you venture the remark that twice as many people are killed by gas stoves as by lightning.—Country Life the description of the plant that affords it shelter, being stores as by lightning.—Country Life the description of the start petting supper on the gas stove.

PUFFED THEIR OWN WARES.

One Way to Dress it and a Royal Way to Grow it.

If ever an anthology of the foods of the earth course to be written quite an entertaining chapter could be made out of the cucumber. And some of the extracts would provide material for much mental exercise to decide whether they are humorous or serious. For example, what did the Greek poet mean when be said of a certain woman:

She was to me

Authors in the Good Old Days Threw Bouquets at Themselves. Authors in "the good old days" were not above writing their own puffs. Charles Reade wrote a long article on himself for Once a Week, in which he said:

said:
It is impossible to speak too highly of "The Cloister and the Hearth." It is one of the most scholarlike and learned as it is to be a support of the most scholarlike and learned as it if it is to be a support of the major speak of help in the speak of hel

More tender than a cucumber?

Only one meaning would have been taken from that equivocal statement by that famous doctor who used to declare that the only way to dress a cucumber is to cut if into very this slices, sprinkle it with the finest of oil, pepper it plentifully, cover it with vinegar—and then throw it out of the window! On the other hand, Thackeray tells how he "had delicate cucum bers stuffed with forcement," while Dickens refers to "salmon, lamb, peas, innocent young potatoes, a cool salad, sliced cucumber, a tender duckling—all there!" Both novelists were eviess!"
But the height of literary advertis-

ness!"

But the height of literary advertising in the first half of the last century was reached in the case of Eugene Sue's famous novel "The Wandering Jew." Every little while the daily installment in the newspaper in which it was appearing would be missing, and in its place would be an announcement that M. Sue was suffering from a slight indisposition and readers would be obliged to wait forty-eight hours for new developments of the narrative. So well did these methods succeed, says Mr. Tassin, that it was impossible to buy outright a copy of the journal, but instead copies were rented out at 10 sous for half an hour, the time thought necessary to read the installment. "And all the while Sue himself was industriously abetting the publishers by posing overdressed and with spurs to his boots at the Cafe de Paris in an attitude of deepest abstraction, as if wondering what the next installment would be about." all there!" Both novelists were ev dently men after the heart of the En dently men after the heart of the Em-peror Tiberius, who was never with-out cucumbers and had frames made upon wheels, by means of which the growing cucumbers could be moved about and exposed to the full heat of the sun, while in winter they were withdrawn and placed under the pro-tection of frames glazed with mirror stone. Learned His Own Value.

A husband and wife combination in vaudeville, with the husband as the feeder and the wife as the real attraction, worked for Lew Fields in one of his summer shows. The two were very popular and got much newspapers space; also they had $1,000 a week. One day the husband, puffed up by what the newspapers said about the singing of his wife, went in to see Fields.

"Mr. Fields," he said, "it is $1,200 a week from now on for us or we quit right here."

When Bjornson Died.

Bjornson's son, in describing the last hours of his father, writes: "Now and then the bright flame of his humor flickered up. The doctor felt his pulse and said it was good. With his face beaming with humor he turned toward us and said, 'I am the first man to die with a good pulse.' He said one evening—and it seemed as if an old wise man was speaking with the weight of experience, 'Now I could write—yes, now I could write piece in the realms of death and have felt the pain that attends death.' And when all of us thought that the indifference of death was upon him—my mother, who always gave him his food, which he would receive only from her, stood he would receive only from her, stoo at the bedside with a brooch on he breast which she had worn at her con firmation—then he opened his eyes and looked at her. He smiled, lifted his was the last sign to the outer world be was able to give.'

All through his life Senator Dollive of Iowa had a horror of fast train and possible railroad wrecks. Once hwas on a train with Vice Presiden Fairbanks.

Dollives awake in the middle of the belinver awage in the induce of the inglet, and it seemed to him that the train was going at terrific speed. He climbed out of his berth and, arrayed only in his pajamas, started down it length of the train to find the coductor and ask him to order the train run at less speed. It was a cold night, but the senator did not mind that until the door of his car snapped shut and locked behind him and he found that locked behind him and he found that the door of the next conch was also locked. He rode sixty-five miles locked out in the cold of the vestibule before he could wake up anybody to let him in. Mr. Fairbanks finally heard his cries for help and rescued him.—New York Tribune.

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has gopened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of the open people will be a second of the contraction. of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. That is the Name That Was Once Given to Rubber.

M. de la Condamine, a French savant, was traveling in 1743 in Ecuador with an expedition sent out to measure a degree of the meridian for scientific purposes. He kept a journal, and the following entry is dated July 11:

In the forests of Quito there flows a kind of resin which is called "cahuchu." When fresh it can be moided into any form. It is impervious to rain.

He further describes how the natives used it for making a special kind of syringe, and in April, 1745, when he had returned from his journey, he presented a sample of "cahuchu" to the Academy of Sciences in Paris. The French word for rubber—caoutchoucis simply a corruption of this Indian was, after all, too big a country to warrant a search for her, he put the letter away. Indeed, he had no time for naything but making his living. He soon got a job, though a small one and hadn't been in New York a month before he "ast off his threadbare suit forever, deaning a new one in its stead.

Pat spent a couple of years with a plumber learning the trade. The apprentice was smart and not only be a me a plumber, but a boss plumber, and four years after having landed set up for himself.

Pat had a great advantage in his cheery disposition. He became very popular with his associates, and, since yoularity in an essential feature of leadership, he became a leader in a small way. A politician, perceiving his induence, took him up and made him one of his lieutenants. Pat developed fine political instincts. He had the art of turning down all grumblers among his adherents with that imperturbable smille of his. This is a power in politics. If he was obliged to give four plums to eight heelers, all of whom had worked equality well "for the tick et," he would give four of them a high control of him. If he was obliged to give four plums to eight heelers, all of whom had worked equally well "for the tick et," he would give four or them a plum each, while every one of the other four men received a smile, an encomium and a promise for "next time."

Pat did not forget Maggie. Several times he made ready to send for her, but every time something happened to prevent. Then he began to make monory, and it occurred to him that it would be a fine thing to go over, marry Maggie in Ireland and bring her home, just as the quality do. He wrote to her to that effect, but she wrote back that such a plan would be too great a waste of funds. So in the end Pat sent har a draft for plenty to buy her a first class ticket, but Maggie, who was of a frugal ture of mind and could not realize Pat's change of condition, would not come over in any berthan bove second class.

Now, it happened that when Maggie reached New York Pat was engaged in matters that required all his attention. He sent one of his workmen to meet her, but it happened that the man was a very stupid person. And as for Maggie, she had never looked upon a town bigger than Killarney, never seen a body of water bigger than the lake on which she had lived and, having always been a housemald, had no head for taking care of herself. She missed the man who had and, having always been a housemaid, had no head for taking care of herself. She missed the man who had been sent to meet her. Fortunately her affairs for passing the immigrant authorities were in first class condi-tion, and she had no trouble with them. But when she was landed at the dock in a strange city, with no one to tell her where to go, her heart sank within her.

Some one looked in a directory for her and found the address of Pat's shop. Then he put Maggie and her belongings on to a trolley car, told her to ask for a transfer, take another line and so mystified her that she didn't know what to do. Riding up the street, she saw floating in the breeze the green banner of Ireland, harp and all. It was a welcome sight. When the car reached a broad thoroughfare it was stopped by a crowd. Maggie got out and was told a procession was about to pass. Some one invited her to get up on a stoop, where she could

A Peculiar Phenomenon That Has a Simple Explanation. In the crude oil producing regions in California there are scores of large pends of this material. After being mped to the surface the petroleum emptied into depressions in the

Later the crude oil is placed in barrels, in large metal cans or else in big reservoirs. These oil ponds are known as "sump holes."

There is one peculiar thing about these "sump boles," and that is in the way of producing what are known as "freak shadows." These are real shadows, but notwithstanding this fact they are decidedly "freaky." If the sun is brightly shining and a person stands for a few moments on the margin of the "sump hole" so that his shadow falls on the surface of the petroleum and he then quickly changes petroleum and he then quickly changes his position the dim shadow remains just where it was originally cast. In other words, the "shadow does not follow the substance.' follow the substance."

This may seem like a paradox, but it is true. The instant a person shifts his position his shadow is again cast in a new place, yet the former shadow remains unchanged. The longer a person stands in one particular spot the longer will the former shadow be visible.

disible. Hundreds of experiments have been nade along these lines, and every time he same results have been produced. The simple explanation for this phenomen is that under the hot sun gas is being constantly generated down in the body of the petroleum, and it rises to the surface in the form of little minute bubbles. So very small are these bubbles that they are small are these bubbles that they are scarcely visible to the naked eye. Mil-llons of these wee bubbles are rising to the top all the time, when the bubbles break and the gas is liberated, passing into the air.

Both the gas and bubbles are so very supersensitive to the temperature that even one's shadow cast for a moment across them is affected. The shadow remains until the rays again warm up that spot and the shadowy outline slowly fades away. Of course the "freak shadow" may be seen for

A STUDY OF NAPOLEON.

Interesting and exhaustive stud have been made in France of Nahand, although, like some other great hand, although, like some other great men, he could never learn to spell. When he was an artillery officer his writing was simple and legible, as his life was simple and direct. But when the Corsican Captain Bonaparte dis-tinguished himself at the siege of Tou-lon and became the French General Bonaparte his writing took on what has been called "a furious illegibility." Curiously enough, from that time degeneration until, profoundly discouraged and utterly humiliated, he scratched an undecipherable, misspelled scrawl of submission to the prince regent on July 14, 1815.

It is said that this change from a simple to a confused writing began at a certain date—namely, with a report, skillfully garbled, of the part he took in what Carlyle called the "whiff of grapeshot that spoke from the steps of St. Roch on the 13th Vendemaire" (Oct. 5, 1795).

The third Lord Waterford was able to verify a story of an extraordinary dream coming true. Talking one day with the landlord of the inn in the village close to Curraghmore, a man rushed up and said there had been a murder on the hills. "Then it must be the little one," said the landlord, at which Lord Waterford, not unnaturally, became very suspicious. The land lord proceeded to explain that in the night he dreamed that two men had come to the inn and that the taller of the two had murdered the shorter with a very curious knife.

He told his dream to his wife, who laughed at him. But, to his horror, the men he had seen while asleep came to the inn, and one used the curious knife to cut up his food. They loss knife to cut up his food. They

From the incorporation of the enterprise there has been strong opposition to it in Woburn, Winchester and Stoneham. It still exists, and from it the fear of Messrs. Flower and Skelton arises and to successfully meet and overcome it is their present mission.

It is probable that the Woburn

City Council will act on the petition at their next regular session As to the main question, there is room for many conflicting opinions. As an employer of labor and for taxes it would be a good thing. On the other hand, the business would have a strong adverse influence on real estate values all over the city, and prevent its growth in population. Many Woburn laborers would be materially benefitted by an establishment of the Company at East Woburn; and many landowners would be injured.

The Phantom Ship That Shows Itself Near the Cape.

IT IS REALLY A HUGE ROCK

a Bark Running Under Short Sail. Other Rock Ship Formations.

The "phantom ship" seen in the vicinity of Cape Horn is, as has been proved by the investigation of various hydrographic bureaus, nothing more or less than a rock which under certain atmospheric conditions bears a deceptive resemblance to a ship.

Very often vessels coming from Europe to the west by way of Cape Horn have been startled to see what appeared to be a derelict with the water washing over her deck. If the appeared to be a derelict with the water washing over her deck. If the sailors were of an imaginative turn they would invest the unknown ship with ghostly qualities and call her the Flying Dutchman or sometimes the "ghost ship" of Le Maire, from the strait of that name, where she was usually seen.

One of the stories which have been longest remembered is that of the ill ongest remembered is that of the ill ated Crown of Italy, which sighted he supposed derelict and subsequently vent ashore. The Crown of Italy was went ashore. The Crown of Italy was standing close to the Jagged black rocks at the entrance to the strait of Le Maire when she sighted what seemed to be a waterlogged bark drifting on the rocks of the strait. Many other ships rounding the Horn have seen a similar apparition, and the various hydrographic offices of the world have received many reports to that effect.

Some years ago the Norwegian bark

Some years ago the Norwegian bark Servia got into Seattle with the tale of a phantom ship that almost exactly of a phantom ship that almost exactly corresponded to that given by the Crown of Italy. The second officer of the Norwegian vessel declared that he had seen a derelict with sails set and decks awash drifting in through the strait. It was this report that led our government officers to make public the declaration that the phantom ship was nothing but a combination of recks and shadows. The numerous reports of derelicts or.

A fixth Sense.

An interesting discussion arose at a recent college lecture concerning the "instinct of direction" possessed so mary-clously by savage races and by animals. Undoubtedly animals are aided largely by scent. In the case of humans it is different, and some of the pupils argued that the primitive main is able to find his way in the densest forest without taking note of the sun, the wind, the lay of the land or the course of the streams. Therefor fore it was said he must be guided by fore it was said he matter. A tender was sent to look into the matter. We same place led even the A regentment to look into the matter. We sa

The passage through the strait of Le Malæ is not often made. Steamers shorten the route by going through the strait of Magelian, while sailing vessels usually prefer to be entirely on the safe side by going still farther south and rounding the Horn itself. Only under the most favorable conditions of weather do they slip through the strait of Le Maire on the outward trip, going toward the southwest, but rip, going toward the southwest, but never when bound for the north. For never met the ghost ship or the rock nute description of the rock and testify to its striking resemblance to a ship. It seems to be standing head on, point-ing to the south and low in the water. The sails are shortened as they would be in what sailors call half a gale. The whole formation is very dark, as if the hull were painted black and the sails weather beaten. It has three masts and is higher on the fore than on the main. Upon coming on the side on the main. Upon coming on the side of the vessel the illusion vanishes and of the vessel the illusion vanishes and the whole thing resolves itself into a conglomeration of black rocks. The perpetual fog of these regions helps, of course, to befuddle the vision. The rock looking like a ship is by no means a rare natural formation. Al-most every sailor has seen one in some part of the world. In the Clipperton islands there is a great white rock looking like a three masted schooner leaning on the wind with her royals eaning on the wind with her royals set and the sun shining on her white sails.

About six or seven miles west of Honolulu there is a rock known as French Frigate rock because once upon a time a French frigate went ashore on it. The cliffs looked so much like a ship that the frigate was deceived and thought she was meeting another vessel.

Uncle Sam's Assay Office In Wall Street Not a "Fence."

ON THE WATCH FOR THIEVES.

Precautions Taken to Keep Jewelry and Gold and Silver Articles, That May Have Been Stolen, Out of the Government's Melting Pot.

The way in which the United States assay office in Wail street keeps itself from becoming a "fence" where thieves and crooks may bring their stolen wares to have them melted and receive cash for the same was recently explained by the superstanders.

explained by the superintendent.

The federal statutes make it difficult for those in charge to refuse any gold or silver handed in. The statute reads or silver handed in. The statute reads in part that "any owner of gold and silver buillion shall be entitled to deposit the same, and it shall be melted and assayed immediately." It does not designate that only the rightful owner may apply for service, and inasmuch as possession is nine points of the law of rightful ownership the assayer is not allowed to be a doubting Thomas.

"Several years ago," said the supe intendent, "there was a city detective stationed in the building to watch for stationed in the building to watch for jewelry and gold and silver pleces that were presented for assaying to determine whether or not they were stolen goods. He remained here for eighteen months, and during that time he did not catch a single thief. The reason was that the news undoubtedly went out to every 'fence', crook and thief of every description in the city that a guard was at the assay office and to watch out for him. watch out for him.

"After the city detective was with drawn it became more necessary to se drawn it became more necessary to secure some other means to prevent our offices from really becoming a 'fence' for stolen articles.

"The one provision we finally incorporated into our rules that has kept away from us the greatest portion of stolen goods that might otherwise be headed in our direction was that we refused to accept any bullion that will assay less than $100. In this way we are able to refuse any ordinary quanassay less than $100. In this way we are able to refuse any ordinary quantity of rings, watches and other trinkets that would be stolen and which we know will not contain pure metal to that amount. Of course sometimes we will accept stuff and it will turn out to be worth a few dollars under the amount, but we cannot always guess correctly when looking at goods. "We have many other ways of determining whether goods presented to us have been stolen, but it would not be wise to let every crook in town know what they are. Sufficient to say that every time we have suspected things were not right we have secured immewere not right we have secured immediate co-operation of the New York detective bureau, and I believe we have secured better results than when a man from the central office was constantly on watch. Then the stuff did not appear. Since then we have been of assistance in tracing down several burglar mysteries.

"When goods are stolen that value or would assay over $100 it is much easier for us to keep the lists of the same which are furnished by the police department and to be on the look out for what is wanted.

"Then when the value of the articles were not right we have secured imp

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

ext of the Lesson, I Kings xx, 12-21. Memory Verse, 13—Golden Text, Prov. xxxi, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

When godly people seek the help of Coke in his "Institutes," "there outh to be a warrant issue from the privy council, addressed to certain physicians and surgeons, authorizing them to administer to the royal patient potones, syrupos, laxitavas, medicinas, etc. Still, none of these should be given except by consent and advice of the council, and they ought to set down in writing everything done and administered, and they should compound all drugs themselves and not intrust their preparation to any apothecary."

Coke wrote thus of precedent in the year 1610, and today the law is practically as he found it, although at the present time in practice the privy council simply hears reports of the progress of the king's malady and leaves actual treatment entirely to the physicians to direct charge of the case.—Exchange.

Too Smart to Be a Lawyer.

B. Davis Noxon was one of the ablest lawyers in central New York. A young man entered his office as a student and was given Blackstone?" "Yes." was his answer. "Read Kent." was the order. In another month he ashed ment of the propers of the cannot be abled than the had finished Kent and "What he should read next. "Do you understand Blackstone?" "Yes." was his answer. "Read Kent." was the order. In another month he announced that he had finished Kent and "What heav?" "Yes." "Do you understand Kent?" "Yes." "Do you understand Blackstone?" "Yes." was his answer. the pains which God takes to win people to Him and to deliver them from the wrath to come, and we are amazed to see Him working even on behalf of such a one as Ahab. But it was all for His great namesake that Ahab might know Him as Jehovah (verses 13, 28). Compare Job xxxiii, 27-30, and remember always II Pet, iii, 9. What He has done for Israel in the past and will yet do for them in the future was and will be wholly for His name's sake that He may be known and trusted (Ezek. xxxvi, 22; xxxvii, 28; xxxviii, 23; xxxxii, 27-29). Even noto this day He is wont to show Himself strong on behalf of very unworthy representatives if only He may be known through them as the living and true God, who loves to save and is not willing that any should perish.

The great hindrance to His saving and blessing people and showing Himself strong on their behalf is their unwillingness and unbellef. How often He has had to say: "And ye would not" (Isa xxviii, 12; xxx, 15; Matt. xxiii, 37; John v, 40). "My people would not bearken to My voice, and Israel would none of Me." "They become the pair and motions are ungainly and awkward.—Wide World Magazine."

His salvation" (Ps. xxxi, 11; lxxvii, 22).

A hab's record is, "There was none like unto Ahab, who did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord" (chaptersxxi, xxv). The only good thing written of him is his penitence, which caused the Lord to delay judgment on him (xxi, 27-29). And yet in this lesson the Lord gave the Syrians and the side were but few and the Syrians a great host. He even caused a wall to fall upon 27,000 of the Syrians. Such a manifestation of the power of God on balaf of such as Ahab is most unusual. We must think not of Ahab, but of Israel as the people of God, et hough in rebellion against Him, concerning whom He said: "How shall I deliver thee, Israel?" (Hos. xi, 8), "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thy seef, but in me is thine help!" "O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God" (Hos. xiii, 9; xiv, 1).

A certain physician sat in a box at the theater the other night. It happened that he was the first man to take his seat in that particular box. The next man ushered in had been hitting just a few of the more elevated points in the highway prior to coming to the theater. "Am I intruding?" he inquired ever so politely of the doctor. "Have you this section engaged all for myself?" "No. I haven't got it engaged all for myself?" in myself. Sit down," replied the doctor brusquely, for he didn't want to encourage the stranger to carry on any extended conversation.

"All right, then," replied the stranger. "If you haven't got the whole section I'll tell the porter to go ahead and let down the upper berth."—

I thought a moment, then suddenly remembered my prayer.
"Come into the house," I said, "and I will see if I can find a clew."
She followed me, and the first thing that attracted her attention was my two children lying asleep with their little fat arms around each other's neck. They had kicked off the covers, and their pink toes were exposed. For the moment the woman's attention was diverted from her trouble to the children. She bent down and touched her lips to the round cheek of each. I offered a seat, and she sank into it.

her lips to the round cheek of each. I offered a seat, and she sank into it. I questioned her and made a note of her replies, but the only information to be derived in the matter I knew, while she did not. The train she was on must have come from the west, but I did not see how this would help us. She might have come clear around the world. Presently I thought of getting her something to eat and, going to the cupboard, took out cold meat, with bread and butter, and made her a cup of tea. She ate a little and drank the tea, all the while value trying to recall the past.

"Well," I said at last, "you'n nave to stay here tonight; tomorrow I'll report your case to the police. Your friends have doubtless notified the police of your disappearance, and in this way we may establish communication with them."

I gave her the room in which my wife had slept with one of the children—the other child had slept with me—and told her she would find articles of apparel and tollet there, the room not having been changed in any way since my wife's death. She retired to it, and somehow I hoped she would never return to her past existence.

"Oh, papa, God has sent us a new mamma."

I took them up in my arms and said, "I sincerely hope he has."

Leaving my find with the children, I took a train for the city and on arrival went straight to the superintendent of police. There were notes of a great many disappearances on his books that had occurred in different places, but none covering this case. I left a description of the woman who had come to me, with her dress and apparent station in life, stating that she was probably country bred. Then I returned to my home, which for the first time since my wife's death looked like home. I found the woman with both children in her lap, telling them stories.

Every day one or more inquiries came from the police, and a number of persons visited us to have a look at the newcomer with a view to discovering if she was this or that missing person, but she did not tally with any of them. Thinking all the while that she would be claimed, we did not change our status, but after a time we began to consider the propriety of hermaning with me. She could not de

When one loses himself from this cause he steps, as it were, from one existence into another. One circle of connections are blotted out—a new circle is formed. It has happened to me to be one of those persons to receive an annesia patient, as it were, coming from another world.

I had been married and had the misfortune to lose my wife. It is hard to lose a beloved partner, but to be left with two little children, as I was, I date my the greatest of domestic afflictions. The care of a boy of six and a girl of four devolved upon me. There was no woman relative on either side of the family whom I could call on to come in and relieve me of the burden.

I was leaning on my gate one spring evening after having endeavored to keep my children with me while at work during the day and having found working and taking care of them incompatible. Looking up to the beavens, wherein the stars were beginning to twinkle, I cried out in my distress; "O God, send me a woman to take care of these motherless behast."

I stood gazing up into the starry firmament until I was recalled to myself by a voice saying:

"Please, sir, do tell me who I am."

LOSSES AT MONTE CARLO.

The extent to which pickpockets car-The extent to which pickpockets carry on their calling at Monte Carlo is shown by the experiences of an Englishwoman, the wife of a prominent member of the British colony in Paris. While playing at the gaming tables in the casino she found suddenly that somebody had opened her bag and stolen her purse, which contained several hundred dollars. In a letter to her husband she writes:

her husband she writes: er husband she writes:
"It was about 5 o'clock when they entered my complaint and a description of the purse in the ledger. I returned after 7 o'clock, and the clerk had to turn back three pages to find the entry.

"Yes, madame, they are,' he replied, and it's the same every day.'"
The writer thinks that "losses" is scarcely the right word to use. She relates the case of another Englishwoman who was robbed of $1,600 in the same way as herself. The victim actually caught a woman's hand in her bag and she held on until some detectives arrived, but the thief had already passed the notes to an accomplice, and she was allowed to go.—Cor. Who Insuited Him.
Alexandre Dumas the elder, the great novelist, had, as is well known, some black blood in his veins and was of an unforgiving if not almost cruel nature. In his earlier days he received a dire insult from one whom he called his friend. To the surprise of all who knew him Alexandre took no apparent notice of the wrong, but Instead applied himself to looking carefully after the welfare of his supposed friend. He took him with him into society, introduced him here, presented him there and so continued for three years, at the end of which time he stood as "best man" at his friend's marriage. ome black blood in his veins and was

Church Theaters.

Few people know that plays in England, Germany, Italy and France were fostered for religious purposes by the church centuries before they were taken up as a separate secular business. Moreover, few visitors to St. Paul's cathedral, in London, realize that that church during Elizabeth's reign and the first years of the reign of James I, set aside one of its adjacent buildings for use as a secular theater. Its little stage was famous, and the company of choir boys as actors presented many of the great plays of Shake speare's time. They acted from about 1508 to 1608 under the management of Edward Plerce, their great master in music, who as church almore had business control of these adjacent buildings owned by the church.—London Standard.

Colored Rain.

Showers of red rain have fallen more than once in the world's history. In the middle ages they were looked upon as awful omens of war and bloodshed, but nowndays we know the hue of the "rain of blood" to be due to the presence of a tiny red insect, a variety of water flea. Red rains are very rare, but in volcanic regions gray rain is comparatively common. Sicily has had many showers of this shade. They are caused by the upper atmosphere being full of ash colored volcanie dust from Etna. This dust is infinitesimally fine and colors the rain

Making Life Worth "Livin'." Making Life Worth "Livin!"
The other day I beheld a woman whose husband earns something less than $200 a month purchasing her seaton's wardrobe. Into it went one hat $50 and another at $30. NATURAL MEASURES.

The first "natural measurement" to which the memory naturally recurs is the hand, four inches, employed in determining the height of horses. This measure is, of course, derived from the breadth of the paim, and it has become so well fixed in popular esteem that it is unlikely it will ever be superseded.

Another popular natural measure is the pace, and probably every countryman who has had to do with land has used it. The usual method is to stride off, taking as long steps as possible, calling each pace a yard.

A natural measure much employed by a dressmaker is the yard ns determined by stretching the material to be measured between her chin and her outstretched hand, or if it be a matter of inches she will fold the bended upper joint of her thumb along the cloth. These natural measures are generally close enough to serve all practical purposes.

BANK BOOKS TELL.

The United States 1910 Censu report was a sore disappointment to Woburn pessimists, croakers and kickers. They had cherished the hope and did not doubt but that the report would show a material and highly discouraging decrease of the population of this city from the census of 1900; but, instead of a falling off of the number of inhabitants, there was a healthy gain.

They told everybody who would listen to them that Woburn was going downhill rapidly in popula-tion, business, and wealth, rolled the fact like a sweet morsel under their wagging tongues. In due time the census report came to hand, knocked the foundation from under their stories and shattered their hopes. Now let us read what the bankbooks say

Cold Trick That Traps the Shy Little Fur Prize.

You are doubtless aware that the ermine of which your must is made has been the emblem of royalty almost since royalty began, in Russia, until since royalty began, in Russia, until very recent years, its use being forbidden to those not of noble birth. But I wonder if you are likewise aware that it is brother, or at least first cousin, to the weasel. Ermine, as a matter of fact, is nothing more than the weasel or common stoat in its northern coat, for, like other arctic and subarctic animals, the weasel turns white in winter in order that it may be as inconspicuous as possible in its environment of ice and snow. Yet so abnormally keen of sight are the Siberian trappers that they can distinguish at almost incredible distances the little black tip of the ermine's tail as it whisks across the dazzing plains.

It is very shy, is the ermine, and special snares must be devised by the trapper to avoid injuring the delicate skin. Even the smallest of the steel traps are too heavy for such tiny ani-mals as these, and here it is that the mals as these, and here it is that the trapper's fertility of resource is most strikingly displayed. Smearing a little grease on his hunting knife, he lays it across the succession of dots and dashes which show that an ermine has passed that way. Along comes the tiny white form on its erratic course again. The grease appeals to it, and it begins to lick the knife blade, which in those far northern lands, where the mercury drops to 20, 30, 40 degrees below zero, is inconceivably degrees below zero, is inconceivably cold. Did you never as a child on a winter's morning put your tongue to George Mivart declares that some piece of metal only to find that frog is unknown in America some piece of metal only to find that it did not easily come away? So it is then with the ermine, whose tiny red tongue is instantly frozen to the steel as though with glue. The knife being too heavy for the little animal to carry off, it can only wait until the trapper comes upon his rounds, and you, my lady, have a muff of snowy unmarred skins.—E. A. Powell, F. R. G. S., in Everybody's.

QUEER STREET NAMES.

One Feature In Which Brussels Outdoes London or Paris.

does London or Paris.

There are many bewildering street names in European cities, and of these London presents a bewildering variety. Bermondsey possesses a Pickie Herring street. Near Gray's inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden, ironically enough, in the slums of the east end of the British capital. f the British capital.

of the British capital.

In Brussels some of the street names are really bizarre. The Short Street of the Long Charlot, the Street of the Red Haired Women and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, an extremely narrow one. But the cream of the Brussels street name surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Coconnut. This in the original appears as one ponderin the original appears as one ponder us word of thirty-six letters. The 7,000 inhabitants of the Rue des

The 7,000 inhabitants of the Rue des Maurals Garcons signed a petition praying that the name of the street be changed. They contended that the denomination of the thoroughfare in which they reside produces a bad impression on those to whom they are obliged to give their address.

This Street of the Bad Boys was, it appears, so named in the sixteenth century because of the noisy character of its inhabitants. But now it needs no such designation, those who reside there being for the most part peaceful and respectable citizens.

Among the peculiar street names in Paris may be mentioned the Street of the Mule's Foot, the Street of the Holy Maybe He Doesn't.

If a tadpole cannot get to the top of the water when it is at the time of life

the dark or away from the light and it will be years getting to be a frog. Left to the course of nature, says Browning's Magazine, the tadpole becomes a frog in from six to eight weeks, although it will have been two years arriving at that chance to change into the mature frog.

The tadpole's mouth is so tiny that it would be difficult to insert a pinhead into it, yet it has horny Jawas and a sharp, biting beak, with three rows of teeth on the upper jaw. A hood grows down and incloses the gills on the right side, leaving them open like a spout on the left side.

At this stage of its transformation the tadpole breathes like a fish, taking water through the gills into the mouth water through the gills into the mouth and spouting it out on the left side. Its tail is what the tadpole feeds on by absorption of the white corpuscles of the blood during the moting and mouthing epoch in its life, when it is fasting. When it is ready to eat again the tail and the horny beak are gone, the wide mouth of the mature frog having taken the place of the latter.

For years he kept it in his cellar, Then it was brought up and hung in his gallery, where it remained as long as he lived. When he died he left it to the nation.

Changing a Name.

The brother of Mme. de Pompadour had at first been created Marquis de Vandieres, a somewhat unfortunate title for a man of such new nobility, for he soon discovered to his profound annoyance that his enemies would persist in calling him the Marquis ist in calling him the Marquis 'Avant Hier (the Marquis of the Day Before Yesterday). Mme. de Pompadour, naturally sen sitive in such matters, brought the af fair before the king and, as a title more or less was a small matter to grant the lady who grasped so much after due forms her brother became the Marquis de Marigny.—From "Mme Gaffrin."

WOBURN NATIONAL BANK

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

These directors give its affairs their personal attention:

WRESTLING BOUTS

One of the Oldest Forms of Sport Known to Man.

THE ART IN ANCIENT EGYPT.

Different Holds-Many of the Old Grips Are Used In the Modern Game.

The strenuous wrestling game is as old as the hills. In the days when men lived in caves, clothed themselves in winter wrestling was part of their mode of fighting. That the change in the mode of life during the long circle of years to the present day has not injured the art, that it exists practically as it was in the dim, uncertain ages of the past, softened and mellowed perhaps in some of the rude essentials, is made manifest by the records which have stood all these years, mocking the attempts of Father Time to efface them.

Time to efface them.

In the temple tombs of Beni Hasan, located near the banks of the Nile, hewn in stone, wrestlers are depicted in various positions, exemplifying all the holds and falls that the modern exponents of wrestling now use in their bouts. In tombs Nos. 16 and 17 exponents of wrestling now use in their bouts. In tombs Nos. 16 and 17 the figures of the wrestlers represent nearly 450 positions. It would seem from this that the Egyptians were masters of the art of wrestling and that the present day athlete scarcely deviates from the methods employed by men in this sport when the earth was young and Egypt was the head, legs and torso of civilization.

It was from the Egyptians that the Greeks obtained their knowledge of wrestling. The figures in the Bent Hasan tombs prove this. The Greeks were the greatest fighters of those days, and it was but natural that they adopted sports as a means to develop their physical condition; hence it was that at their games held at Olympia and elsewhere at stated intervals wrestling was part of the program. At these games the champions of the friendly nations met in rivairy. There was great glory attached to a victory. The successful competitor was treated like a hore. His return to his native was great glory attached to a victory. The successful competitor was treated like a hero. His return to his native land and his entry into his home city were made an occasion for a triumphant procession. He was the hero of the day, of the hour.

The Olympic games—their revival dates from 776 B. C.—were held every four years at Olympia, in Eills. They were started as a religious festival in honor of Jupiter, but the games, like the play, soon became the thing, and the people lost sight of the solemnity and sanctity of the meetings and assembled there just to see the sport.

It was in the eighteenth Olympiad. 107 B. C., that the first record of wrestling was established. Eurabatos, a Spartan, was the victor. He carried off the prize, a crown of wild olive made from a tree which stood within the belegger at Chympia.

off the prize, a crown of which olive made from a tree which stood within the inclosure at Olympia.

It will be seen from this that wres-tling is one of the oldest sports, pas-times, means of attack or defense, call it what you will, known in the history of man. From the dawn of literature there are records of wrestling bouts. To Homer we owe that glittering, glowing description of the encounter between Ajax and Ulysses. He immortalized Ajax, who was the incanation of strength, the physical power in man, and Ulysses, the crafty, the champion of every art and wile. Homer before he was stricken blind witnessed many great wrestling bouts in the Greek cities. In his "Iliad" he graphically describes the wrestling bout between Ulysses and Ajax.

Nor is that all. In the convulsions of strife which followed among the fighting warriors, down through many chaotic changes out of which empires rose and feli along the path of time, in periods duil, creaking, rude and From the dawn of literatur in periods dull, creaking, rude and gross down to the present decade, wrestling was known, understood and played its part. That Shakespeare in his day realized its popularity and made use of it is evident in that scene made use of it is evident in that scene between Orlando and the duke's wrestler in "As You Like it." Although the play was supposed to take place in France, the wrestling in this scene is a reproduction of that practiced in England at that time.

The former is all that its name implies. A wrestler may catch his adversary on any part of the body, neck, head or limbs. In the latter style the hold is restricted to that part of the body above the waist line.

supervising the foreigner, be he an archist or banker.

Every foreigner arriving in Switzerland must procure from the town hall a permis de cejour within eight days of his arrival, under penalty of a fine, or, in serious cases, of expulsion from the country. In order to obtain this permission his papers must be in order—that is to say, he must take his passport to his consular representative in Switzerland and have it signed by the latter. By this simple method the identity of the foreigner is established, and in return for his papers, which are docketed in the town hall, he receives a permis de cejour for a period lasting from a few days to a year—the maximum duration—when it must be renewed. This rule is so strict that the district of the content of the foreigner is established, and in return for his papers, which are docketed in the town hall, he receives a permis de cejour for a period lasting from a few days to a year—the maximum duration—when it must be renewed. An exception is made in favor of visitors staying at the principal hotels and pensions, who are nominally allowed two months' stay (instead of eight days) in Switzerland before they are expected to legalize their papers, but this law is not strictly enforced, as the hotel proprietor supplies the police with a list of his guests at frequent periods.—Washington Star.

Suns of the Night.
"During the day we say that the sun shines; during the night we should say that the suns shine," writes a Boston correspondent of the New York Times. "During the day one sun reigns over us; during the night many suns sparkle and scintillate upon us. The only difference is that our sun of day is so much nearer than our suns lay is so much nearer than our suns of night, but there is one sun of night of night, but there is one sun of night that during our winter far outshines the other sparkling sky gems. That sun is Sirius, whose distance has been estimated at 50,000,000,000 miles, whose size has been conjectured to be as vast as that of 7,000 suns like our own."

Hunting on Treacherous Soil.

Snipe shooting on an irish bog is an excellent test of a gunner's skill and enthusiasm. An experienced bog shooter if he finds himself going down throws himself flat on his side or back and at the same time throws his gun to his attendant, generally an unshod "gossoon," who rarely falls to catch it. The sensation of being bogged is very unpleasant, but if a man throws himself on his side or back there is strength enough in the peat to support his body.—"Forty-five Years of Sport."

When the chicks are hatched out they are the most delightful little brown birds imaginable. The color is a rich deep brown, and they much resemble young pheasants both in size and in coloring. Many people have often laughed at the curious etiquette noticeable in the behavior of bees toward their queen. But the peafowl etiquette in introducing young chicks to their owner is at least as curious. As soon as the chicks are able to walk the mother marshals them in a procession, and, leading herself, she stalks to the place where she and the others are generally fed. Having formally introduced her brood, she takes them back to the nest, and they are not seen any more for some weeks. The hen will come and be fed, but the chicks are supposed to remain in retreat till they are grown to the size of spring chickens, when they come out and join the rest of the fowls and learn to feed for themselves.—Country Home.

Sticks in Your Throat.

A new and ingenious remedy for a bone in the throat will be found in an account of a Persian pilgrimage published under the title of "The Glory of the Shia World." The doctor was Mirza Sadik Khan, chief physician of the vakil ul mulk:

"The patient was brought in on the verge of death, and when his condition had been described the learned physician stroked his long beard and exclaimed: 'By Allah! This case would be hopeless except for me, whose perception is phenomenal. The cause of this man's state is a bone lodged in the throat so firmly that no efforts the throat so firmly that no efforts avail to dislodge it. Therefore either avail to dislodge it. Therefore either the man must quickly die or the bone must be dissolved, and by what agency? Thanks be to Allah, I am a physician and a Kermani and have observed that wolves, who live on raw ment and bones, never suffer any calamity such as that of the patient. Therefore it is clear to me that the breath of a wolf dissolves bones and that if one breathes down the throat of a patient the bone will be dissolved.

She would not be obliged to contemplate from her rear windows the shabby cottage, the tomato cans, the old brooms, bottomiess coal scuttles and broken crockery. It would be for others to view this inartistic scene, while she would look upon more inviting objects. transformation had taken place over-night, for the trusty James had done his work well.

Instead of the squalid disorder of the bare, grassless yard there was a cov-ering of fine green turf. Quantities of rich brown earth had been formed into flower beds all around the house. Beds of glowing red geraniums were massed here and there, while gorgeous pansies here and there, while gorgeous pansies filled every available space that was not occupied by snowy sweet alyssum. It was like the transformation scene

In a pantomime.

The back door of the cottage opened, and Anne almost heard the cry of amazement that burst from the lips of Marcia Rodman and her little girl. The mother stared with unbelieving eyes, while the child danced with delight among the flowers and then disappeared around the path that led to the front of the cottage.

"Oh, mother." Anne heard her cry; "It's splendider in front than it is in back. It's the beautifulest place we ever lived in."

The little mother pressed a hand-

A moving van was backed up before the door of the cottage, and in its cavernous depths Anne could see a pitiful gathering of furniture. The men began to unload the van, and Anne noted that the few pieces, though somewhat shabby and worn, were of handsome quality and in excellent taste. She also saw that the windows of the house had been brightly polished and that crisp, clean muslin curtains hung within.

These things promised a more ambitious occupant for the house. Anne turned to the secretary: "Miss Binns, will you please telephone to Mr. Collins and ask him about the new tenant?"

The little mother pressed The little mother pressed a hand-kerchief to her sweet eyes, and Anne saw her approach the fence where James had presented a placidly inter-ested countenance. ant?"

Presently Miss Binns returned. "Mr. Coilins says it is a widow and her little daughter. The mother is employed in a milliaery establishment downtown. She seems a quite, refined young woman, and her name is Rodman, Mrs. Marcia Rodman."

Anne Wilbur dismissed the little secretary and turned once more to the window, pressing her face against the coid glass. The van had gone away and all was silent about the shabby cottage. As she watched with haggard face the back door opened and a woman accompanied by a child came out and looked at the neglected yard. The woman was small and slight, with a dark, piquant face and sweet lips. There was a flush in her cheeks as she talked to the child, who was a fairylike image of the mother. It was evident that they were discussing the possibilities of improving the yard, and Anne wondered what they could do, for it was plainly to be seen that they were poor. When the moth er and child had re-entered the cottage Anne left the window and sat down before the glowing grate fire. There was a fierce joy in her gray eyes and her fine lips were scarlet with the pressure she exerted to restrain her emotion. It had come her turn at last. Five years before she, Anne Wilbur, a petted daughter of the rich, had lost her lover to the poor woman who now occupied her wretched cottage. The girl had been a noher face in the fragrant alyssum. Anne knew that she was praying. She was probably asking God's blessing on Anne Wilbur's proud head.

Then a transformation came over Anne Wilbur's heart until it blossomed like the barren cottage garden. Tears filled her gray eyes, and through the tears she seemed to see herself grown stronger, more tolerant, more pitiful. She saw herself making the way smooth for Jack Rodman's wife and child, and the brightness of the Easter sunshine seemed to fall all Easter sunshine seemed to fall all about her until she was enveloped in body, and thriftless Jack Rodman had thrown over friends, position and profession and eloped with the dark eyed beauty. Jack had died afterward penniess. Now ms winow, strugging for a livelihood, had drifted back to the city and into the cottage owned by the deserted sweetheart.

Again she approached the window and stared at the cottage. The mother and child were gathering the rubbish into a heap, and presently they set fire to it and watched it burn to ashes. Presently the mother brought a trowperature at hight.

The reason is that the presence of dust serves as an obstruction to the free radiation of heat through the air. The sunbeams pass through very pure, clear air without lending much heat to it, and at hight the heat received by the ground during the day readily one. Presently the mother brought a trow il of the yard, and the child plant the ground during the day readily es-capes through the same air, but if the d some flower seeds with eager mud dy little fingers.

When that was done they came to the dividing fence and peeped over into Miss Wilbur's pretty garden. There was a brave showing of crecuses and tulips, and the strangers looked wistfully at the purple and gold of the blooms; then they turned and disappeared within the cottage.

"Set aside a hundred plants of the finest of each. Take two men over to the cottage and clean out the yard thoroughly. After that is done report to me."

HINDU FUNERAL PYRES.

Burning the Dead at Benares a Careless and Callous Rite.

Describing the burning of their dead by the Hindus of India at Benares, Price Collier in Scribner's Magnzine says:

I have been present at these burnings. The bodies are brought in on a frail litter. A pile of logs is built up, held in place by four iron stanchions. The body, with the head uncovered, is placed on the logs, more logs are piled on top, the litter is broken up and added to the small fagots underneath and the fire lighted. There are various ceremonies connected with the rite. The body is carried several times around the pile before being pined upon it. The nearest relative walks around the pile with a jar of water, letting it drip down as he goes till of a sudden he dashes the jar to the ground, breaking it to pleces—a symbol of life, everywhere. At a certain moment, too, the skull is fractured by the nearest relative to allow the easy bol of life, everywhere. At a certain moment, too, the skull is fractured by escape of the spirit to another world. Where the deceased is rich the fire is made of costly and sweet smelling wood, sandalwood and the like, and the ceremonies are more elaborate and more prolonged. No doubt it is the ideal way to dispose of a dead body, but when I have seen it done here it seemed to me a callous and a careless rite.

I have noticed all over India the absolute indifference of the natives them selves to the pain and deformities and maladies that are displayed as an and manades that are displayed as an excuse for alms. It is not the stoicism of our western Indians, who thought it dishonorable to show fear or to shrink from pain, but an imbedded indifference, a numbness to this particular influence.

It Was Comfortable Even if It Didn't Hang Just Right.

Miss Amanda Jones, who possesses the artistic temperament in a very high degree, is as careless as a lily of the field as to her attire. Not long ago, being away from home and far from the watchful eyes of her family, she selected and purchased an evening gown for herself and wore it on several occasions with great comfort and satisfaction. Shortly after her return to her home she was invited to a reception and decided that it would be a good opportunity to wear her self segood opportunity to wear her self se-lected gown. GIBRALTAR.

The "Key of the Mediterranean" Has Had a Stormy History.
England has been in possession of the rocky promontory of Gibraltar since 1704. From that time to this it has been a crown colony under the administration of a governor. By reason of its important strategical position it is called the "key of the Mediterranean."

Gibraltar has had a stormy history. In 711 the rock was taken by the Arab chief Tarik, who called it Jebel-al-Tarik (Hill of Tarik) and built a for-Tarik (Hill of Tarik) and built a for-tress on the promontory. Part of these ruins are still extant. In 1300 it was taken by the Castillans, only to be re-captured by the Moors in 1333. It was held by them until 1462. Following the taking and sacking of Gibraltar in 1540 by Barbarosso, extensive military works were built there by order of Charles V.

works were built there by order of Charles V. In 1704 the promontory was cap-tured by a combined force under Slr George Rooke and the Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt, fighting for the Archduke Charles of Austria. The moment it fell into their hands the British admiral threw off the alliance with the Austrians and took complete possession of the works.

British possession since that time has been unbroken, although it was under a Spanish siege for nearly three years and eight months, beginning in 1779. Twice the garrison was on the point of falling because of the starvation of its defenders,

Finally the poor foreigner gave it up and with a great deal of difficulty, recalling the landmarks which he had observed the day before, found his way to his friend's house. Arrived there and in company with one who could understand him, he delivered himself of a severe condemnation of the cabmen and the police of London for their impertinence and discourtesy.

His friend asked for a look at the mirth provoking address and the mys-

The cathedral at Salisbury, England. Illts its spire 404 feet, which is quite a respectable height even in the day of skyscrapers. This spire is topped by a bail, and on the ball stands a cross. From the ground the ball looks to be about the size of an orange, but in reality it is greater than a man's height. We have all heard of the "pro-Duke of Somerset, but we do no know of the occasion on which his pride had a fail. The story is told in "The Glenbervie Journals."

It seems that the duchess had sent for Seymour, a celebrated painter of horses, to make the portrait of a race-horse at Petworth. Seymour during his stay used to dine in the steward's room, but one day the duke was so pleased with the picture as it advanced that he desired that he would dine at his table. dine at his table.

In reality it is greater than a man's beight.

A distinguished American visiting Salisbury when a very young man had a curiously weird adventure on this spire. Workmen were at the time repairing it. The American saw them crawling round the silm steeple in the afternoon light like so many bugs on a bean stalk. The impulse came to him to climb the spire and stand on the horizontal beam of the cross. Accordingly, late in the afternoon, when the workmen had gone, the young man made his way up the stairs to the little window which opened to the workmen's staging. To run up the scaffolding to the ball was easy. Then came At dinner Seymour, who probable had not been expected to mix in the conversation, took occasion to say the believed he had the honor to be rehe believed he had the honor to be re-lated to his grace. This gave such of-fense that he was either sent away or put so much out of humor as to go away from Petworth without finish-ing the picture.

Afterward the duke's pride gave way to the destre he had of possessing a good portrait of his favorite horse, and he ordered his steward to write to Seymour and engage him to return to Seymour and engage him to return to men's staging. To run up the scaffolding to the ball was easy. Then came the slightly more difficult climb to the foot of the cross over the bulging curve of the ball. A short platform gave him foothold. He reached up and put his hands on the base of the cross and pulled himself up. To gain the crossarm was merely "shinning" up a good sized tree, and soon he stood on the horizontal timber and, reaching up, touched the top of the cross. Seymour and engage him to return to finish his work at Petworth Seymour directed his reply to the duke himself in these words: "You pride would not allow that I am o your family. To convince you that am, your picture shall remain as it is for, by —, I won't come!"

reaching up, touched the top of the cross.

After enjoying his moment of triumph he slid to the foot of the cross and with his arms around the post slipped down over the big bulge of the ball. His feet touched nothing. The little plank from which he had reached up was not there. Here was a Poe-like situation requir Here was a Poe-like situation requiring a cool head and a stendy eye. He could, of course, not look down. The clinging hold that he had to maintain on the bottom of the cross shortened the reach of his body and made it less than when he stood on the plank and reached up to the cross with his hands. He must drop so that his feet should reach the plank, for he would never be able to pull himself back if

THE GULF STREAM.

No Material Change in its Course In Modern Times.

Much has been said in recent years in regard to the changing route of the gulf stream. Indeed, the character of this steady, consistent and unswerving body was getting so maligned that the government looked into the matter, with the result that this mysterious current of the ocean was entirely vindicated. Experts declare that there is no change in the course nor has there been for many years.

No other physical feature of the ocean is subject to more persistent misinterpretation than is the gulf stream. All vagaries of climate are laid to its charge. It is a pet theory of many that the temperature of Europe is greatly affected by it, but this idea is held by high authorities to be erroneous. It is not as extensive as is commonly thought. Practically starting at the Florida strait, where its volume is made up by the union of currents, it censes to be a true current by the time it reaches the southern limit of the Grand banks, where it becomes surface drift, governed by the never be able to pull himself back if he should let himself down at arms' length, and his feet hung over empty But this young American had a good head, which he immediately put to work. He looked up at the cross and tried to recall exactly the angle at which he had reached for it, to make his memory tell him just how the edge of that square post had appeared. A few inches to the right or to the left meant that he would drop into vacancy. Bending his head away back, he strained his eye up the cross and figured bis angle of approach. He cautously wormed himself to the right and made up his mind that here directly under his feet must be the But this young American had a good ern limit of the Grand banks. becomes surface drift, governed by the Young Eagles.

An eagle lives from 80 to 100 years. The young birds are driven forth by their savage parents to provide for themselves as soon as they are able to fly. No training is given them by the old bird. That is left to their wild instincts, which hunger and necessity develop. There is no "going back to the old home" for the young eagles. The mother bird tears up every vestige of the nest, and if they emit plaintive shrieks the old birds dart at them and push them off the future use.

From these observations it appears that the art of cookery is not wholly confined to the human race. All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery, the saliva with which it moistens dart at them and push them off the crags or rocks and thereby make them take to their wings. It takes three years for a young eagle to gain its complete plumage and strength.

Nothing to Do.

The following bit, quoted from Lord Cromer by Heien Barrett Montgomery in her "Western Women In Eastern Lands," presents a picture of the monotony and deprivation of the life of the Egyptian lady that pages of statistics might fail to convey: The seclusion of women exercises a most baneful influence on eastern society. This seclusion by confining the sphere of woman's interest to a very limited horizon cramps the intellect and withers the mental development of one-half the population of Moslem countries.

An Englishwoman once asked an Egyptian lady how she passed her time.

WOBURN NATIONAL BANK

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

GOVERNMENT. To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

The Collector's Wife

stepped the boundary between Asia and Europe and had gained a foothold in Italy. Orders were issued to the medical officers along the American coast to quarantine every ship arriv ing from Mediterranean ports and to permit no sick person to enter the country without submitting the patient to a thorough test for the dreaded disease.

One autumn day, when a storm was sweeping the coast of New Hampshire, Jeremiah Whipple, newly appointed collector of a little port of New Hampshire, opened the window of his bedroom to more clearly examine a vessel that had just cast anchor in the harbor. She was a small steamer, and at her peak was the United States flag, upside down, which Whipple knew to be a signal of distress. Taking up a spyglass, he brought it to bear on the vessel and saw a group of persons vessel and saw a group of persons standing amidships uncovered.

Then suddenly the group scattered, several of them going to a boat that hung on its davits, lowering it and lowering of an oblong box into the boat, where it was reverently received by the crew. Lastly, a man, evidently an officer, took his place in the stern of the boat, grasped the tiller ropes, and the boat moved away from the

The boat pointed straight for the shore, at one moment its bow shooting up toward the sky, the next diving down toward the bottom of the bay. When it came within half a mile of the shore, Whipple, armed with his badge of authority, went down to the dock to warn them to keep off. He had never before been in a position of trust, and he felt that the keeping out of an epidemic which might sweep away thousands of his countrymen rested upon his shoulders. As soon as the party came within hearing he shouted: shore, at one moment its bow shooting

Then, all standing uncovered, it was lowered to its last resting place, after which the party filed back to the dock, where the mourner again tearfully thanked the collector for his kindness thanked the collector for his kindness and, waving a last farewell to the grave on the knoll, was pulled away to the ship.

During the scene Patience Whipple was looking out of the window watching the landing, the burial and the departure of the party. When Jeremlah returned to the house he sat down before the fire, feeling a sad comfort in having permitted a fellow being to carry out a promise to his dying wife. Patience was doing her morning duties and made no comment on what had passed. Then Jeremiah went to has little custom house on the dock, where he sat reading a newspaper, for since few, if any, goods ever came into the port he had no great weight on his shoulders. When he returned to his home for the noon meal his wife said to him:

Whipple looked more disturbed over the matter than his wife. His salary as collector was infinitely small, and there was not much comfort for him there was not much comfort for him in life, his wife having a hard time to clothe and educate the children and make ends meet. Besides, the government might be informed of what had been done and he would lose his position. On the whole, he was as much depressed over the result as he had been elated at having done a good action.

trust, and he felt that the keeping out of an epidemic which might sweep away thousands of his countrymen rested upon his shoulders. As soon as the party came within hearing he shouted:

"You can't land here!"

A tall, thin man rose in the bow of the boat, took out a bandanna hand-kerchief, wiped his eyes and sald:

"We do not desire to remain ashore longer than to bury the body contained in this box. My wife was taken down with cholera six days out of Naples. Fearing that she would die, she exacted from me a promise that I would not permit her to be buried at sea. Both the officers and crew of the ship have respected her wish, and I now beg that you will permit me to inter the remains here on the shore."

Even if the collector had been more familiar with the duties of his office it is questionable if he would have felt any certainty with regard to the disposition of this case. He felt a dread of cholera and was anxious to get rid of the party as soon as possible. There could be no violation, so far as he could see, in either the revenue or quarantine laws. The party need not be searched since none of them asked to be permitted to remain ashore. It was possible that if allowed to land they might make a break for the interior, but this in the case of a buriel nearly was not to be considered.

they had no case against me and didn't know who I was until all was settled."
"By gum, Patience, you're a brick!"
Mr. Whipple, having capital, went to the city, became a politician and is now collector of a large port. He has eliminated all trickery among smugglers in his department. But it is understood that credit for this happy state of affairs is due to his wife.

This affection is capable of being communicated by contact, for the application of a few grains of the powder to the surface of a block of perfectly sound tin brings about its transformation in a few days.

Catching the Speaker's Eye.
The practice of "catching the speaksres's eye" dates back to the session of 1640, when a hearted dispute arose between members of the house, several of whom claimed precedence of speech. It was then decided that whoever first caught the speaker's eye should have the right to address the house. This rule worked smoothly until 1685, when Sir John Trevor was elected to the chair. The new speaker was afflicted with an abominable squint; consequently two members would often eatch his eye simultaneously and decline to give way to one nother. After breakfast, when Jerry went down to his office, he noticed some loose earth on the knoll where the burial had taken place the day before. He went up there and discovered that the grave was open to its very bottom and the box had been removed. Turning to the harbor, he discovered that the ship which had been anchored there the evening before had also departed. He went in to his wife and said excitedly:

"By gum, Patience, those fellows were smugglers?"

"What makes you think so?" asked the wife.

INSTANT DEATH.

t Is Not So Quick but That the Mind

It is Not So Quick but That the Mind Has Time to Act.

It is questionable if such a phenomenon as instant death is known to the scientist and investigator. Physicians and surgeons tell us that death by gunshot wound is the easiest mode of terminating life; yet, rapid as such a mode of taking off must necessarily be, the body has leisure to feel and time to reflect and on rare occasions even to act.

On the first attempt of one of the he notion that the ceiling of a room had fallen in and crushed him.

Another question in this connection is that of probable pain. Although numerous instances could be cited in support of the view that the mind acts cases of so called instant death, it In cases of so called instant death, it by no means follows that the infliction of a fatal blow is attended by the least semblance of pain or a single pang of fear or regret. Unless death results immediately, however, the pain may be as varied as the nature of the in-juries.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Memory Verses, 13, 14—Golden Text, Isa. xlv, 22—Commentary Prepared It is a most interesting and profitable nent all the people and the events which the Lord Jesus mentioned in His teaching and to remember that Jesus of the New Testament is none other than the Lord God of the prophets, whose goings forth have been from of old, from the days of eternity (Mic. v. 2, margin). In Luke iv, 27, He mentions both Naaman and Elisha, and of course that includes the little maid of Israel and all the other people and leadens of the course in the course of the course in the course of the course o of Israel and all the other people and incidents of the story.

In chapter iv, 8, we read of a great woman, and now it is a great man and honorable, a deliverer and mighty man of valor, but a leper. He was a great man in the eyes of his fellows, but had he lived in Israel he would have had to live without the camp.

Leprosy is a wonderful type of sin, and, it matters not how great a man may be in other men's eyes, if he is an unsaved sinner he is a child of wrath, dead in sins, without Christ and without God (Eph. il, 1, 3, 12), and those who die in that condition are forever shut out (Rev. xxi, 8, 27). In as seemingly strange ways as the Lord as seemingly strange ways as the Lord brought healing to Naaman He still wins sinners to Himself. He may use a centify and health with the still with the st as seemingly strange ways as the Lord with ships and the still wins stnners to Himself. He may use a captive maid, humble servants, was teers of Jordan, etc., but He is always seeking to save the lost, not willing that any should perish (H Pet. iii, 9). The little captive maid stolen away from her home might have so hated her captors as to wish them evil and be glad that Naaman was a leper, but she evidently had the spirit of Him who taught to love our enemies and to be subject even to perverse people (Matt. v, 44; I Pet. ii, 18). So she pitted Naaman and told of the prophet in Samaria, of whom she knew or had heard many wonderful things. From the slowness of believers to tell of the Lord Jesus and His wonderful redemption the world has a right to conclude that they have nothing wonderful to tell.

The result of the little maid's testimony was that the king of Syria sent. Naaman to the king of Israel with a letter and a lot of silver and gold and raiment, asking from the king health for his servant. There was a double retter and a lot of silver and gold and raiment, asking from the king health for his servant. There was a double mistake in sending to the king in-stead of the prophet and in supposing that money could purchase heaven's gifts. The maid had spoken of the prophet in Samaria, not the king, and a true prophet is a spokesman for royalty and, as a rule, has no use for poor men even if they are prophets. Such pride must be laid low before God can help such people.

The king of Israel thought that the king of Syria was seeking a quarrel with him in making such a request, and he rent his clothes. Elisha, hearing of it, said to the king. 'Let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel.' So Naaman came in all his pomp and pride to the door of the house of Elisha, thinking that the prophet would make a display of his power and in some striking way give him health. When the prophet did not deign even to come to the door, but sent a messenger, saying, 'Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy fiesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean,' Naaman was so angry that the turned and went away in a rage. When we remember that even Abraham's thoughts brought him trouble (Gen. xx. 11) and Mary's supposing gave her three days of sorrow (Luke in 44-46) we do not wonder so much at the result of Naaman's thoughts. Simple faith in God and prompt obedience is the only safe way. Servants sometimes have more sense than their masters, and so it proved in this case, for, as they reasoned with Naaman that he would gladly have done some great thing, then why not do this simple thing? He went and did as Elisha had said, and his flesh became as the flesh of a little child, and he was clean. There was no special value or efficacy in the waters of Jórdan, but it was to the content of the waters of Jórdan, but it was to such the waters of Jórdan, but it was to such as the waters of Jórdan, but it was to such as the water of Jórdan, but it was to such the waters of Jórdan, but it was to such as the water of Jórdan, but it was the water of Jórdan in the water of Jórdan that the speaker should call by name upon the member privileged to address the house. COWED THE THIEVES.

Odd but Effective Way of Attaching a Man's Property.

Attaching a man's property for debt is supposed to be a legal process, but an incident which occurred years ago in the city of Natchez, as related by Davy Crockett in his "Life and Adventures," shows that the, are other "attachments" which sometimes accomplish a beneficent purpose.

An odd affair occurred when I was last at Natchez, declared Mr. Crockett A steamboat stopped at the landing, and one of the crew went ashore to purchase provisions. He went into a saloon on the way, and the adroit inmates contrived to rob him of all his money. The captain of the boat, a determined fellow, went ashore in the hope of persuading them to refund, but they declined.

Without further ceremony the captain, assisted by his crew and passens gers, some 300 or 400 in number, made fast an immense cable to the frame building where the thoft had been committed. Then he allowed fifteen minutes for the money to be forth-coming, rowing that if it were not a produced within that time he would put steam to his boat and drag the house into the river.

Boswell had a good deal more feeting for music than Dr. Johnson and suffered at his master's hands. Once in a moment of expansiveness he told Johnson that music "affected him" to such a degree as to agitate his nerves mest painfully, producing afternative sensations of pathetic dejection, so that he was ready to shed tears, and of daring resolution, so that he was inclined to rush into the thickest of the battle.

He Guessed Four Times Before He Properly Labeled the Crowd.

At a banquet attended by nearly 300 members of a fraternal order in one of the large cities not long ago, given in honor of a citizen who had been elected president of the order, the orchestra, after playing several selections, struck up "Wearing of the Green." Apparently everybody present began to sing it, almost drowning out the instruments.

"It's easy to see," remarked one of the guests, "that this is an Irish crowd."

Presently the orchestra began the
